91st YEAR, No. 103 ★★ VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1974 15 CENTS DAILY, 30 CENTS SATURDAY

STILL PAYING THROUGH NOSE

CRESTON (CP)—Premier Dave Barrett says bad drivers will continue "to pay through the nose until they smarten up and become better drivers."

Barrett made the comment Wednesday after he said the government has made no decision on elimination of the $10 driver certificate.

He said at a luncheon that regardless of changes made, the penalty point system will be maintained to assess financial penalties against drivers with bad records.

Under the present Autoplan program, penalty points are assessed against drivers for traffic violations and anyone with more than six points in a year is forced to pay a special assessment to a maximum of $420.

Barrett's travels Wednesday—the third day of his two-week public relations tour of the province—started in Nelson, then took him to Salmo and Creston and wound up with a public rally in Trail where he again told an audience of 600 the government would "sock it to the bad drivers."

FIRST STEP IN WILKINSON ROAD PHASE-OUT

Convicts to Jordan River

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Forty prisoners likely will move to a new trailer camp near Jordan River in the first move toward phasing out antiquated Wilkinson Road jail by the end of the year.

Hal McGillivray, deputy director of the prison, said Wednesday the corrections branch is acquiring 40 acres in the provincial forest reserve seven miles beyond Jordan River on the road to Port Renfrew.

He said four acres will be developed into a campsite consisting of dormitory trailers for 40 of the 90 men at Wilkinson Road, as well as trailers for cooking, recreation, office and storage.

Initial outlay for the new camp is expected to be $100,000. The figure does not include costs for clearing or installing basic services.

McGillivray, who is implementing the program, said he hoped to complete a budget by next week.

It will be reviewed by a special three-member panel which the attorney-general's department struck last month to consider alternative programs for the men in Wilkinson Road jail.

The members include Ed Stanton, probation officer in the Victoria area; Martin McNeil, a University of Victoria graduate student, and Ted Pollard, a Victoria lawyer.

McGillivray hoped work on the site could begin within two weeks.

There is a 30-day delivery on the trailers, he said.

"We would like to be able to start the program by the end of November . . . although it could be anytime between now and Christmas."

The inmates — all minimum to medium security risks and serving sentences of less than two years — will not be involved in setting up the camp, but will make improvements to the property.

Rayonier of Canada holds a tree farm licence on the 40-acre site and McGillivray hopes the licence will be transferred to the corrections service. The company reforested the area in 1957.

Ferry Fare Boost Hinted

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Transport Minister Bob Strachan hinted today that B.C. Ferries fares may be increasing soon and inflation may also force an increase in next year's Autoplan premiums.

Car and passenger fares on B.C. Ferries have not increased since the service began in 1960, said Strachan, and the system has suffered annual operating deficits since 1967.

This year's deficit may be as high as $20 million, he said.

While not actually confirming the possibility of rate increases Strachan said he has asked for a report to be prepared on the ferries' financial status.

He called B.C. Ferries the "best ferry bargain in the world" and noted huge increases in operating costs, especially the cost of fuel and labor.

Last week B.C. Ferries increased its commercial rates.

Speaking during the taping of B.C. TV's Capital Comment program, Strachan announced that a full statement on Autoplan will be made at the end of this month.

At that time ICBC will disclose its premium for next year, as well as any new programs or subsidies.

Strachan evaded the question of whether drivers' certificates may be cancelled next year and said the entire 1975 program will be announced at the end of the month.

Again Strachan would not confirm the possibility of premium increases next year and he said "people will be happy with the rate structure."

But he told reporters that private insurance companies in the rest of Canada were predicting a $20 million loss this year despite two rate increases in the last 12 months.

He also cited increases in the accident rate and the cost of repairs.

Also on the topic of ICBC, Strachan said the government is negotiating with insurance agents on the commission they will receive for selling government insurance next year.

The agents had originally agreed to a seven per cent basic commission, but are now complaining the rate is too low.

JOAN KENNEDY

Joan Kennedy Charged

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Joan Kennedy, the wife of Senator Edward Kennedy (Dem. Mass.), has been charged with driving under the influence of alcohol after her convertible crashed into two other cars stopped for a street light.

Fairfax County police said the charge on conviction carries maximum penalties of a year in jail and a $1,000 fine, and suspension of driver's licence for six months. Police said, however, that such penalties are reserved for grave cases that usually involve injuries or fleeing the scene of the accident, circumstances that don't exist in Mrs. Kennedy's case.

Police said Mrs. Kennedy was administered a breath analysis test, but they would not disclose the results. The charge of driving under the influence is the only charge in the state of Virginia if alcohol or drugs are found above a certain level.

No one was injured in the crash.

DOW SOARS

NEW YORK — The stock market advanced again today, continuing the strongest rally in months.

The 2 p.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 24.33 at 655.35, adding to a 28-point surge Wednesday.

TRASHMEN TO EARN $18,400

ANCHORAGE (AP) — Garbage collectors have won a three-year contract calling for $18,400 a year in the pact's final year after a 39-day strike.

Municipal trade unions returned to work Wednesday after reaching agreement with the city on a contract that raises wages 46.5 per cent over three years, a city spokesman said.

The wage hikes are retroactive to Jan. 1.

Riot Team Cools Boston

Times News Services

BOSTON — Four hundred riot-trained state and metropolitan police arrived in racially torn Boston today to help protect children and enforce a court-ordered plan to integrate Boston's public schools.

Busloads of black children quietly entered schools in the neighborhood.

The extra policemen, outfitted with riot gear, were ordered into the area by Gov. Francis Sargent after a federal judge rejected Mayor Kevin White's request for 125 federal marshals to help keep the peace.

In Washington, President Ford said the court-ordered busing "in my judgment, was not the best solution to quality education in Boston."

He added, however, "I think it's of maximum importance for the citizens of Boston to respect the law."

Street violence Wednesday was centred in the predominently black Roxbury section, as it was the previous day.

Until Tuesday, most of the violence was in the white South Boston section.

At least 14 arrests and 11 injuries were reported Wednesday as black youths threw rocks at buses and cars and looted stores in the Roxbury section.

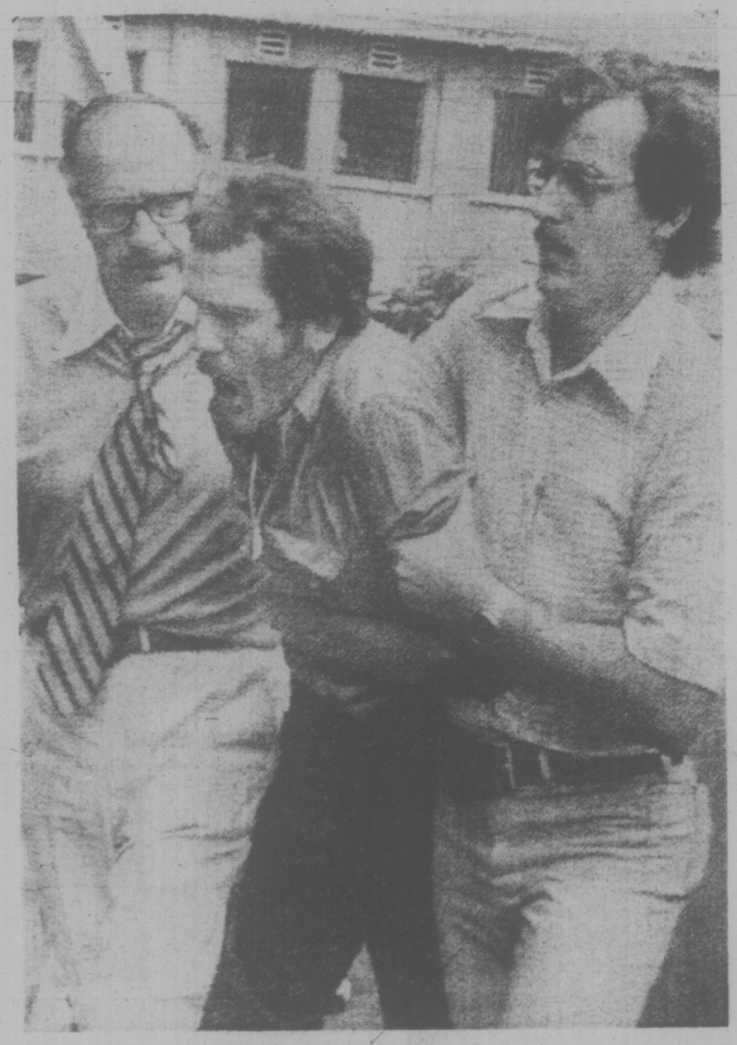
Fights were reported inside Hyde Park High School, resulting in the suspension of 19 students.

City-wide school attendance shrank to 60.1 per cent. One elementary school was closed early as a safety measure.

A white man, James Horan, 33, was dragged from his car and beaten by blacks in Roxbury, apparently in retaliation for the similar beating of a black in South Boston on Monday.

He was admitted to hospital with serious head injuries.

In South Boston, the black bus driver of a city bus and a white female passenger were injured when the bus was stoned, went out of control and struck a house.



Colleagues help CBS newsman Haney Howell after beating.

Thieu's Police Kick, Beat Demonstrators, Newsmen

And for the second time in less than two weeks, police beat up Western correspondents covering the protests.

The demonstrations, the biggest against Thieu in three years, were generally free of police interference until a splinter Buddhist group continued to demonstrate in front of the National Assembly after most of the about 1,000 protesters had dispersed.

Uniformed policemen began to scuffle with the stick-wielding Buddhists, who were complaining that police had beaten two of their comrades earlier in the day.

At least six demonstrators were taken to hospital, including a Buddhist nun with a broken leg and a 40-year-old man beaten for carrying an anti-government banner near Saigon's central market.

When Western reporters filmed and photographed the scuffles, men identified by sources close to the police as plainclothes policemen turned on them.

Two reporters—Haney Howell, Siagon bureau chief of CBS, and Time magazine's Barry Hillenbrand—were kicked and beaten.

Howell, who was beaten with Associated Press photographer Neal Ulewich while covering similar demonstrations 10 days ago, was taken to hospital.

Citizenship Wait Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigrants will qualify for Canadian citizenship after three years in this country under legislation introduced today in the Commons.

At present, all immigrants must wait five years before qualifying for citizenship.

"Under the new bill," State Secretary Hugh Faulkner said, "applicants for naturalization are treated alike, regardless of sex or country of origin."

Female immigrants, regardless of the fact that they marry Canadians, now would have to wait three years like everyone else.

It also would reduce the age of majority to 18 years from 21, which would allow young immigrants 18 or over to apply for citizenship on their own behalf instead of through a parent.

Faulkner, explaining the proposed amendments to the Citizenship Act said they are designed to make the legislation "more equitable, logical and consistent."

The bill also would eliminate differences in rules applying to men and women.

Generally, a woman who marries a Canadian citizen may become a citizen right away, whereas a male immigrant has to wait the normal two or five years.

NEWS BRIEFS

Boats Explode

RICHMOND (CP) — Police and Fraser River harbor authorities are trying to determine if there was loss of life in a boat explosion that destroyed three vessels at Steveston early today.

Richmond fire department officials said they were unable to fight the fires because two of the boats, in flames, had drifted out into the river and the third had sunk when they arrived at the scene at 3 a.m.

Bank Drops Clients

DETROIT (AP) — The Michigan National Bank of Detroit will close all savings accounts with balances under $50 starting next week because of rising handling costs, bank officials said.

Mayo May Close

NANAIMO (CP) — The Mayo Lumber Co. will close its sawmill operation here Dec. 6 unless market conditions in the lumber industry improve, a company spokesman said Wednesday. About one-half its employees are already laid off.

Plot Uncovered

ROME (Reuter) — Italy's anti-terrorism police squad has arrested four right-wingers on charges of plotting to kill leading Italian politicians as a prelude to a coup d'etat, the interior ministry said.

Britons Stream To Polls

Times News Services

LONDON — A bomb scare today forced evacuation of Liberal party headquarters in London as Britons streamed to the polls in heavy numbers.

Police searched the building but found nothing and allowed staff to return after 35 minutes.

It apparently was a hoax, police said.

The Liberal headquarters was also ransacked in a break-in on election eve Wednesday.

A spokesman said at first "this looks like another Watergate." Police later said it appeared to be a plain case of burglary.

A bomb scare also delayed voting in Belfast.

If the forecasts of all the major pollsters are to be believed, the governing Labor party was a heavy favorite to be returned to power. But the polls have been dead wrong in the past.

This time, pollsters conceded that late shifts by undecided voters and apathy might result in an upset.

Though flattered by the predictions, Home Secretary Roy Jenkins insisted on the eve of the election:

"It's not going to be quite as easy or as decisive as that."

Prime Minister Harold Wilson, however, said he believed Labor to be "on the eve of a great victory."

Bonn Spies Preyed on Own Bosses

BONN (WP) — A former cabinet minister charged Wednesday that the West German intelligence service had been involved for years in spying on the country's top political leaders and other prominent citizens.

The ex-minister, Horst Ehmke, said that the intelligence agency, the Federal Information Service, had compiled what he regarded as illegal dossiers on 54 persons, including two former chancellors and two former presidents.

Testifying before a parliamentary investigating committee, Ehmke said that the list of those put under surveillance included leaders of all the West German political parties and persons prominent in academic, military and other fields.

Among them, Ehmke claimed, were former chancellors Willy Brandt and Ludwig Erhard and former presidents Gustav Heinemann and Heinrich Luebke.

Others that he named included Christian Democratic leaders Rainer Barzel and Franz-Josef Strauss; Erich Mende, former chairman of the Free Democratic party; Gen. Hans Speidel former general inspector of the armed forces, and Simon Wiesenthal, director of the Nazi-hunting Jewish Documentation centre in Vienna.

Ehmke's allegations came in the course of testimony before the committee investigating the circumstances that enabled an East German spy, Guenter Guillaume, to win a post on Brandt's chancellory staff.

The uncovering of Guillaume's identity triggered Brandt's resignation as chancellor last May.

Ehmke's allegations seem certain to stir the same kind of debate that was touched off in the United States following revelations that the Central Intelligence Agency had been drawn into the Watergate affair.

The Bonn agency, which is commonly called the BND after its German initials, was created by the CIA during the postwar occupation period and covertly financed by Washington before its absorption into the West German government.

For many years, it was referred to in intelligence circles as the Gehlen bureau, after Gen. Reinhard Gehlen, its first head.

According to Ehmke's testimony Wednesday, the BND's domestic spying activities began during Gehlen's tenure and continued after his retirement in the mid 1960s. Ehmke said he learned of them when the Brandt government took office in 1969 and he was assigned supervision over the igtelligence organization as part of his duties in the chancellory office.

GRAIN BILL VOTED

OTTAWA (CP) — Back-to-work legislation to end the six-week Vancouver grain-handlers strike received final Commons approval today.

The legislation, which now goes to the Senate, passed by a voice vote without debate.

Following debate in the Senate, the bill must be given royal assent. It becomes law the day after royal assent, which is expected to come on Friday.

The legislation ends the strike and imposes a settlement based on a conciliation report prepared by Dr. Neil Perry of Victoria.

Henry Kancs, secretary-treasurer of the 550-member Grain Workers' Union, said Wednesday the workers could have export grain moving again by Tuesday if the legislation is passed without delay.

The bill was approved by the Commons labor committee after four hours of discussion Wednesday night. The Conservatives criticized the government for not allowing witnesses other than Labor Minister John Munro and department officials to give their views on events during the 10 months of bargaining.

Wilkinson Move Set

He said the inmates' principal activity will be developing parks on the West Coast Trail beginning at China Beach.

"The men will be doing something constructive" a public service. Hopefully they will get some satisfaction from it.

The camp will be classed as a prison but of an entirely different sort from the 61-year-old stone-faced, iron-barred Edwardian institution on Wilkinson Road.

Although the men's activities will be controlled and regulated 24-hours a day, there will be no bars on the traillers, nor fence around the camp.

McGillivray doesn't feel such measures are necessary because of the "remote location" of the camp.

He said most inmates favored the new scheme.

"It will definitely produce a more relaxed, congenial atmosphere. The men won't be as aware as they are now that their freedom has been denied them."

Keeping the camp size down to 40 men will also produce beneficial side-effects, he added.

"We'll be able to do more for the men . . . teach them more . . . help them along with their work progress, and discuss behavioral problems with them more freely."

The camp might not stay at Jordan River.

"Once work finishes in the area we may move on to a new location," McGillivray said. "We could, for example, end up moving along the West Coast developing the trail as we go."

He said some inmates may be permitted to get a job with forestry companies in the area on a work-release basis, returning to the camp each night. They would receive the going labor rate and be required to pay $4 a day room and board.

The future of the prisoners who don't go to Jordan River has not yet been worked out but a decision is expected within three weeks.

John Ekstedt, head of planning and development for corrections services in B.C., said there are several possibilities for relocating those persons awaiting trial and are in jail because they are unable to raise bail, or have had bail refused, or are awaiting a psychiatric assessment. More than 15 per cent of the prison population falls into this general category.

He said a study completed six months ago revealed 40 per cent of those people on remand could be "easily taken out of jail if only they had a place of residence with a modicum of supervision".

He said people awaiting trial may be released under a special kind of street supervision plan such as the bail supervision program which was recently instituted in Vancouver.

Another option might be creating a "bail hostel" in Victoria where they could be sent until their cases are disposed of by the courts.

A number of private agencies, such as the Salvation Army, have indicated willingness to take part in this kind of program, Ekstedt said.

No acceptable alternative appears in sight for the relatively small percentage of prisoners requiring maximum security.

The dilemna was explained by one prison official:

"We don't want to get into something worse than we have right now."

BURNS
. . . disagrees

It's a Recession: Burns

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Disagreeing with President Ford, Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, conceded today the country is in a recession.

He does not share the widespread view that it will get worse, he said.

"We have a recession but it is a most unusual recession — a recession for which there is no precedent in history," Burns told the Congressional Joint Economic Subcommitee.

The U.S. never before has had a recession accompanied by "galloping inflation" and a "boom" in business capital investment.

Ford told a news conference Wednesday, "I do not hink the United States is in a recession. We do have economic problems but it is a very mixed situation . . ."

Ford's new economic proposals, meanwhile, were characterized by two Senate Democrats today as both a continuation of the policies of the Nixon Administration and a surrender to the oil-producing nations.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield said Ford's 31-point program "bears too close a resemblance to the fiscal and monetary policies of the previous administration, policies which have long since proved inadequate to meet the emergency."

Sen. Henry Jackson added that the president's energy-related proposals fell "far short" of the emergency at hand and were "a surrender" to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Jackson said Ford's energy proposals fell particularly short of his "sabre-rattling tough talk" to the oil-producing nations.

"What has been lacking is the leadership, the managerial skill and the will to set a tough responsible national energy program in motion," he told a news conference.

"Let there be no mistake about it — we are in the midst of an energy war — Fighting the economic agression of the OPEC cartel—and we must respond accordingly. We must marshal the talent and resources required to cut our growing dependency and cut it sharply in the next 18 months."

PHILLIPS SUES SUN, COLUMNIST

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor Art Phillips has begun a libel action against the Sun Publishing Co. Ltd., publisher of the Sun, and columnist Allan Fotheringham.

A writ filed with B.C. Supreme Court alleges libel in two columns in the afternoon newspaper last week.

Fisherman Killed

A 59-year-old Victoria fisherman was killed in Ucleulet Wednesday when he slipped off a cable ladder and fell about 20 feet striking his head on a floating dock where his boat was tied.

Ucleulet RCMP said Julius Fichtner, 109 Burnett Road was pronounced dead at the scene.

Police said the mishap occurred at 2:45 p.m. as Fichtner's salmon troller, the Grassholm, was being unloaded at the Prince Rupert Fisherman-s Co-op centre.

Two Municipalities Refuse to Pay Levi

Two lower mainland municipalities have refused to share excess welfare costs this week while Victoria has agreed to pay the $64,800 in unbudgeted welfare payments.

A third agreed to pay half of what Human Resources Minister Norman Levi said will be billed and at least three have not decided whether they will pay.

Victoria's payment will leave the city's contingency fund dangerously depleted, with only $33,900 left.

The only comment from city council at this week's meeting came from Mayor Peter Pollen, who said in a barely-audible aside to city manaer Jim Bramley, "I'd like to write an obscenity on the cheque."

Port Moody and Coquitlam councils decided to refuse payment of costs billed to them. Port Moody's bill was $15,523 while Coquitlam was to pay an extra $79,845.

Surrey council offered half of the $150,000 charged that municipality.

Saanich, Burnaby and North Vancouver have deferred action.

Esquimalt earlier this week voted to pay its $19,400 bill.

Oak Bay council learned that it will only have to pay about $2,700 becuase of earlier conservative welfare budgetting.

Levi said Sept. 23 that municipalities would have to put up $5.5 million of the $103.5 million welfare overrun disclosed earlier by Premier Dave Barrett.

L.I.P. Bids Are Sealed

Between 50 and 60 applications from the Victoria area for Local Initiatives Project grants have been received in the Vancouver L.I.P. office.

Application deadline was Monday and Tom Schoeller, L.I.P. officer for the Victoria area, said he doesn't expect many more to trickle over from the mainland.

This year $322,000 in federal funds is available for Victoria L.I.P. projects. Grants vary according to the type of project, but the average is $20,000.

Last year about 80 L.I.P. applications came from Victoria, Schoeller said.

Spawning Problems Seen For Goldstream Salmon

Low water levels in Goldstream River are expected to cause problems again this year for spawning salmon.

Beginning Nov. 1, the Greater Victoria Water District will release eight to 10 million gallons of water a day from Goldstream and Sooke Lake reservoirs to raise the water level.

But the problem is not acute, said conservationist Freeman King, because fish have not yet appeared at the mouth of the river.

Water was released into Goldstream last year by means of a creek diversion when low water levels caused a similar problem.

"What we really need is rain," said water district commissioner Ron Upward.

"Fish cannot be fooled by artificial means."

Federal fisheries biologist Jerry Paine said, "The scent of rain in river beds makes the salmon instinctively navigate to their home rivers."

Fish may remain at the mouth of a stream for some time waiting for rain, Upward said, but instinct will eventually draw them to their spawning grounds even without scent of rain.

Major chinook salmon runs occur at the end of October and into November. Coho and chum salmon travel upstream in November and December.

THE FINAL WORD IN RECALLS . . .

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. Food and Drug Administration announced Wednesday the recall of 50,000 pairs of silicon breast implants and 2,000 pairs of silicon testicle implants because of defective packaging that could result in infections.

The products were distributed during the last year by the Dow Corning Corp. in the U.S. and in Tokyo, Brussels, Canada and Australia.

The FDA said routine testing by the company last month disclosed that defective packaging had caused some of the products to be non-sterile.

A non-sterile breast or testicular implant might cause infection after surgery, the FDA said.

Both products were put in blister packs at Dow's Hemlock, Mich., plant and bear the firm name of Dow Corning Corp., Medical Products, Midland, Mich.

the weather

The weather system lying from the central interior to Vancouver Island is accompanied by some rain and was forecast to move out of the province later today. Once this occurs the generally fine autumn weather of the past few days will return to most regions of B.C. The exception is the north coast region which will again come under the influence of an intense Pacific storm. This system now is just west of the weather ship and moving northward into the Gulf of Alaska. The indications are that the major impact of rain this time will be into the Alaska Panhandle and northward. Temperatures will hold in much the same range as with the previous clear skies.

Community News Round-Up

Shirley . . . One of a New Breed

They're Helping Themselves

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

A Victoria West apartment block used to produce as many as five nighttime crisis calls a week to community worker Shirley Wakeham.

The crises varied — a child being thrown against a wall, a suicide attempt, a family quarrel.

Today residents of that apartment block run a co-operative garden and a baby-sitting pool.

Some mothers are taking a course in behavior modification, and one is learning mechanics so she can fix the others' cars.

Prompted

They're learning to solve their own problems, because Wakeham brought them together and prompted them to help themselves.

Wakeham, who works out of the human resources department's Vic West office, isn't simply a social worker.

She's a community development worker, a relatively new breed in the Victoria area.

She tries to show people how they can tackle problems by banding together and working as neighbors instead of keeping to themselves.

"We have had the lonely nuclear family for a long time and it just wasn't working," she said.

Community development seems to have as many definitions as there are people doing it, but the common word with all definitions seems to be "catalyst".

"I see a community development worker as a worker who really acts as a catalyst in helping communities identify and solve their own problems," said Al Mollberg, director of human resources for the Capital Region.

These workers aren't supposed to do things for people as much as to spur people to do things for themselves.

Top-Notch Job

The city has one full-time paid community development worker, Lorne De Girolamo who was hired a year ago by the James Bay Community Association to work in James Bay.

Wakeham has other responsibilities as well, said Mollberg, but she's doing "top-notch community development" in Vic West as well.

Both are paid by the human resources department, although De Girolamo's salary comes out of human resources grants to the community association.

Mollberg said that eventually other neighborhoods in the Capital Region could get workers, if their neighborhood advisory groups decide they need one. The department isn't likely to send in a community worker uninvited, he said.

Wakeham spends much of her working day, at the Vic West Neighborhood Centre at 519 Craigflower, which has become a focus for community action.

She has been involved in helping the Vic West improvement association plan what to do with their share of a $2 million federal Neighborhood Improvement Project grant (James Bay gets the rest).

She helps groups get organized, helps them apply for grant money, visits services like day care centres to offer advice.

And Wakeham thinks her work as a catalyst has already had an effect.

"These people will have the resources within the community to do a lot of things on their own by Christmas," she said.

Ideally community development workers should aim to be so successful that the community will no longer need them.

De Girolamo sees a large part of his job as communication — finding out what's happening in one part of the community and letting the rest of the community know about it.

Bringing people together to help each other is also important, he said.

De Girolamo helped do a survey of 1,600 James Bay residents which revealed more than 200 lonely people who simply wanted someone to pay them a social visit from time to time.

The survey showed more than 500 willing to make such visits. Now the job is to get the two groups together, he said.

Involved

John Talbot, community development consultant for the Development Group which supervises creation of four human resources and health centres in the province, is a veteran of four years in community development work in Vancouver.

His definition of community development is getting people interested, informed and involved in issues affecting their neighborhood.

That issue can be landlord and tenant problems, the need for day care or many other things, he said.

The worker must be able to reach and involve everyone from senior citizens to teenagers and businessmen, he said.

"I don't believe government can fund community development workers," Talbot said.

"In the long run there will be conflicts."

If a government-funded worker is instrumental in making citizens aware of a problem in their neighborhood and they start to protest to government, some government members will become unhappy about payng his salary, said Talbot.

This has happened in Vancouver where city council is cutting off funding for 15 community development workers hired by the Neighborhood Services Association he said. Provincial and federal funding will also be lost, he said.

In Saskatchewan the provincial human resources development agency has recently cut off money for community development staff, Talbot added. And there are other examples, he said.

The only answer, he said, would be for the community association somehow to raise enough money to pay the worker without relying on government funds.

The response was tremendous to VIC WEST'S "Junque Sale" and out of it will come a new floor for the Neighborhood Centre, on Craigflower Road, more issues of the newsletter and hot dogs, pop and coffee at the Halloween bonfire.

About $1,400 was raised at the Saturday event on Esquimalt Road from the estimated 1,000 people who attended. (See pictures on Page 6).

Shirley Wakeham of the publicity committee of Victoria West Development Association said members sorted Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights before the sale. She said there was a lot of interest shown within the community and some donations were received from Langford.

Federal public works can't talk to Royal Oak ratepayers about the new postal sorting building without first receiving written permission from Saanich Mayor Ed Lum or his council.

Mrs. Ruth Clay, secretary of the ROYAL OAK Ratepayers Association received a letter from R. McKee, project manager for the public works branch declining to meet and discuss plans for the proposed mail sorting plant.

McKee said in the letter he held an in-camera meeting with the mayor and council and that he gave an undertaking not to discuss the plans with anyone without first obtaining permission from council.

The multi-million dollar sorting plant is to be constructed between the Pat Bay Highway and Glanford Avenue behind Simpson Sears warehouse.

Mrs. Clay says the decision by McKee "leaves us high and dry."

She said wishes of residents should be taken into consideration in planning the facility.

The public works branch is expected to come up with preliminary plans within two months.

Meanwhile the ratepayer executive will meet in the near future to discuss the matter.

Mild Palliatives for the U.S.

United States President Gerald Ford, in announcing his new economic program, said inflation could "destroy our country" and then went on to list mild anti-inflationary palliatives. Like his Canadian counterparts, and most other Western governments for that matter, Mr. Ford counsels voluntary restraint, and keeps harsher alternatives in his back pocket. Rumored gasoline taxes, rationing or even wage-price guidelines were not mentioned in the president's Wednesday address.

The five per cent surcharge on individual incomes above the $15,000 family level is expected to diminish consumer purchasing power by $2.6 billion in 1975, a measure many economists consider doubtful during a recession. Corporate incomes will also be subject to the five per cent surcharge. But other tax benefits for business include a revision of the investment tax credit law that will produce a corporate tax saving of $2.7 billion in 1975, more than offsetting the $2.1 billion drained by the corporate surcharge. In addition Mr. Ford proposes that dividends on preferred stocks be fully deductible for income purposes by the issuing company. In a scarce money market the measure could be of great benefit in raising equity capital.

Almost all of the president's proposed actions require congressional approval. And Republican senators and representatives, many of whom are about to sally forth on the election trail, will not find it easy to sell a new tax that will cost a family of four earning $20,000 an extra $128 per year. Even more difficult for Republicans seeking re-election, the president mentioned no new tax relief proposals for the so-called working poor. Current tax credits for the poor add up to $2 billion of which $1.6 billion has already been provided for in a bill that is virtually sure of passage through both U.S. houses.

As with every U.S. economic initiative, there is bound to be some fallout in Canada. While the $3 billion U.S. housing incentive could result in $14 million worth of new orders to B.C.'s slumping lumber market, some commentators fear that the new investment tax credit plan might drain investment capital earmarked for Canadian development to newly attractive U.S. markets.

At the centre of President Ford's economic thinking is the belief that a more favorable investment climate will stimulate the creation of new jobs. By increasing taxes, cutting spending and aiming for a balanced budget he is following the dictates of economist Milton Friedman's monetarists who were the resident thinkers, during the Nixon regime. But tough anti-trust provisions and promised surveillance of anti-competitive practices are new tacks. Yet the president who criticized General Motors for raising prices in his first few days of office, chided neither unions nor corporations in his most important economic speech to date. At this juncture Mr. Ford's plan looks like traditional Republicanism. Whether it is good economics, only time will tell.

Old Habits Die Hard

Little more than one year ago Oak Bay council reduced the speed limit on McNeill Avenue from 30 miles per hour to 20 miles per hour. Oak Bay's police Chief John Green said he had no objections but reminded council the municipality did not have enough policemen to properly enforce the new limit. In reducing Vancouver Island speed limits to a uniform 50 miles per hour and clamping a 55 mile per hour limit on most other primary highways throughout the province the provincial government faces a problem analagous to Oak Bay's.

It appears the government slashed the speed limits and then began to think about enforcement. In announcing the new limits Highways Minister Graham Lea said he will discuss greater enforcement with Attorney General Alex Macdonald. But what can Mr. Macdonald do besides sending out a new directive to police departments? The RCMP, which polices most of the province's highways have their hands full nabbing the most flagrant speeders on 27,460 miles of provincial highways.

If lower speed limits reduce the carnage on B.C. highways — in 1973 there were 825 deaths and more than 25,000 injuries resulting from automobile accidents — the government action will have been successful. It is worth a try considering the United States experience where traffic deaths declined as much as 25 per cent with the introduction of a 55 miles per hour speed limit last year.

But the key remains strict enforcement. Modern cars are barely idling at 50 miles per hour, and human nature being what it is, few drivers will resist the temptation to speed unless they know there is a good chance of being ticketed. Old habits of 60 to 70 miles per hour die hard.

Pity the Sasquatch

The nip of fall is in the air and a man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of Sasquatches. At least two expeditions are out in the wilds of the Pacific Northwest, beating the bushes to bring back one of the legendary apemen, dead or alive.

Spare a thought for the poor beast. What could we tell him? Inflation at 15 per cent a year, ex-president Nixon pardoned, 28 million rotten eggs, the price of beer about to go up again, a $103 million welfare "overrun."

Anyone who can retain a semblance of privacy amid the encircling gloom deserves to be left alone. The Frank Buck types out to prove the Sasquatch really is flesh and blood ought to be stopped. Extend endangered species status before we learn too late that they're just a race of fur-coated hermits, fleeing from television deodorant commercials, Watergate, income tax and parking tickets.

". . . there goes my favorite hunting grounds . . ."

W. A. WILSON

Detente Still Fragile Object

OTTAWA — The international drama of the moment, the sort of development that pre-occupies and worries everyone, lies in the economic arena and we tend to pay much less attention to political and military problems.

The minister of finance, John Turner, justifiably refers to "monumental problems" that demand increasingly effective action and the British chancellor of the exchequer, Dennis Healey, describes the same situation as an "economic earthquake" occurring during the "most turbulent year for the world economy since the 1930s." Robert McNamara, the World Bank president, said on the same occasion that millions of the world's poor are in danger of death.

It is just as well, though, to remember that all of these things unfold against an international political background which has military and diplomatic as well as economic aspects.

Difficult Task

Probably the best recent review of the political background is the one which U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger presented to a U.S. senate committee last month. Because he had a heavy day on that occasion with the committee members over some of the CIA's activities, and his own connection with them, not much attention was given to the very important review he presented. Through 26 closely-typed pages, Kissinger analyzed the present condition of the east-west detente which is to say the underlying political condition of the world. He warned repeatedly that detente, the improvement in relations between the opposing blocs, is a continuing process, not a final condition.

Early in the review, he pointed out that "in the nuclear age the relationship between military strength and politically usable power is the most complex in all history."

Later touching on the U.S.-USSR negotiations aimed at limiting strategic weaponry (the SALT talks) he offered an insight into this strange, contemporary problem. The United States has been developing plans for more flexible strategic responses in the event of attack which would not necessarily involve nuclear reprisals against Soviet cities. The hope, of course, is that if there were a war, American cities might also be spared.

"Translating this capability into a coherent system of planning became a novel and as yet uncompleted task of great complexity," the secretary of state commented. He added that when nuclear arsenals include thousands of launchers and over 10,000 war-heads "it becomes difficult to determine what combination of numbers of strategic weapons and performance capabilities would give one side a militarily and politically useful superiority."

Attempts to change the present nuclear balance would require efforts so enormous, and increments in force so large, that the attempt alone would be "highly destabilizing." He pointed out, however, that technological change alone presents a pressure towards continuation of the arms race and that this is one of the reasons why negotiations became so desirable.

HENRY KISSINGER

Kissinger warned his senate audience against basing American policy on tenuous hopes of change in Soviet motivation because the atmosphere changes and policy oscillates between "poles of suspicion and euphoria."

"The hopeful view ignores that we and the Soviets are bound to compete for the foreseeable future. The pessimistic view ignores that we have some parallel interests and that we are compelled to co-exist."

He said he felt that by the end of the 1960s the time was propitious for a major effort to improve U.S.-Soviet relations because contradictory tendencies were contesting for pre-eminence in Russian policy and events could have tipped the scales either way, towards increased agressiveness or more conciliation.

As events developed, the prospect of achieving near parity with the United States in military strength tempered the military strength of some Russian actions. The economic problems of the USSR, instead of driving it inwards toward a more self-sufficient approach, led it to come closer to admitting the interdependence of the world economy. On its side, the United States developed the approach of seeking to move forward across a broad front of negotitions, hoping that progress in one area would increase the momentum in others — the tactic of "linkage."

In Kissinger's view, the breakthrough came in 1971 when progress was made on several fronts — Berlin, the SALT talks and in other arms control negotitions. Principles were elaborated between the two countries, not as guaranteed but as bench-marks, and consultation reached "a high level of candor and frequency without precedent." Contacts over a wide range, many apolitical, developed and the question of economic relationships emerged.

Distastrous Attempt

Kissinger warned that the subsequent senate efforts to link changes in the Soviet domestic order (Senator Henry Jackson's initiative) to the development of trade, coming after agreements had been signed, gave the Soviet union reason to doubt the reliability of the United States as a negotiating partner. He warned that a denial of economic relations cannot achieve now in the moral field what it failed to achieve a quarter-century ago in the political and military area.

"We have accomplished much," Kissinger said, enumerating some of the changes, such as the disappearance of the Soviet education exit tax for emigrants. "But we cannot demand that the Soviet Union, in effect, suddenly reverse five decades of Soviet, and centuries of Russian history. Such an attempt would be futile and at the same time hazard all that has been achieved . . . Such an attempt would be disastrous. We would not accept it from Moscow. Moscow will not accept it from us."

He also warned, with emphasis, that improved relations are developing from balanced strength and cautioned against "a tendency in democratic societies to relax as dangers recede," arguing that maintenance of strength is not incompatible with improved east-west relations but its pre-condition. His strongest warning, however, was that detente is not a permanent condition but a process and that the effort to develop it must go on, always realistically aware that "in cataloguing the desirable, we must take care not to jeopardize what is attainable."

RICHARD GWYN

New Faces, Subtle Changes

OTTAWA — This parliament is different from the last, whether you look at it from above or from below.

The MPs who look upwards now can see among the reporters in the press gallery the familiar profile and wavy silver hair of Paul Hellyer, who until a few months ago was a Conservative front-bencher.

Looking downwards into the chamber, the change is even more obvious. The Liberals fill up all the seats to the speaker's right and indeed room has had to be found for a couple of Liberal MPs on the opposite side of the house.

The most important differences between the 30th parliament and the 29th, its life cut short by the election, are all obvious. The Liberals enjoy a majority, and so will also enjoy four years or so of power free of the threat of unseemly interruption; the principal opposition parties, the Conservatives and New Democrats, both are leaderless and until they find new men both will remain uncertain trumpets.

Caucus Power

The new parliament is so new that its character as yet is unformed. Some of the changes are subtle. In the last parliament Liberal MP John Reid, who works with the government house leader, walked about with one pocket of his jacket pulled out of shape by a radio-operated device that every now and then would beep to warn him that the opposition parties had mounted a dangerous attack upon the minority government in one of the Commons committees. Reid still has the gadget, but he hasn't put it on yet and takes for granted it won't beep so often.

The Liberal caucus of backbench MPs and senators has as much to lose in a majority parliament as any opposition party. Until the election, the caucus could at times pull rank on the cabinet. Petro-Canada, the national petroleum corporation, might never have become government policy but for back-bencher pressure. The evidence so far is conflicting. Immigration, a crucial and controversial policy issue, is being debated by a caucus committee; at the same time another key policy subject, the tax exemptions of Time and Readers' Digest, have been discussed in cabinet without reference to the party caucus.

Television, rather than the political judgments of the voters, could make the most dramatic changes in parliament. "Once the cameras come on we'll have to stop fooling around," said one MP.

TELEVISION CAMERA
. . . coming to Commons

Television is serious — the red eye makes and unmakes reputations. Speeches will be shorter, interruptions will be less blatantly partisan, MPs will try to remember the lessons from Marshall McLuhan and cast themselves in a cool, low-key image. Serious but casual, sincere but unstuffy.

Parliament's rules and procedures will be reformed. Parliamentary reform isn't a subject that arouses Canadians from Atlantic to Pacific to a white heat of excitement. Yet it is crucial. Out of the throne speech have come 68 separate pieces of legislation. Most of these date back to the last parliament; some, such as the Citizenship Act, go back three years or more. Yet there is no chance that this backlog of legislation can be cleared in a single session of parliament.

Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp, showing the training of six years as minister of external affairs, prefers to talk about parliamentary "effectiveness" rather than parliamentary "efficiency." Efficiency conjures up an image of the Commons as a sausage grinder for the meat that the government decides to stuff into it.

Give and Get

Effectiveness, in theory, works both ways, for the opposition as well as for the government. "Parliament doesn't govern," says Sharp, "It is the place where the government is checked, called to account." Sharp has met three times with the house leaders of the opposition parties. His plan "to give as well as to get" is to reach agreement on some basic reforms within the inside group before turning the matter over to a commons committee.

The most likely concession Sharp will have to make in return for a cutback in opposition time-wasting will be a more liberal policy of publishing government documents, all of which at present can be classified confidential to await the convenience, or whim of the cabinet.

The parliament, finally, has robbed Canadians of a chance to watch history being made. Had Hellyer won his test he would have been a candidate for the party leadership when Conservative leader Robert Stanfield steps down. Six years ago Hellyer competed against Trudeau, he thus would have become the first person to contend for the leadership of both major parties. Instead, Hellyer will have to cover the convention looking down from the press section. That's a good vantage point, but the action goes on below.

Editorial Correspondence

Maritime Princess

Wouldn't the Princess Marguerite provide a very fitting home for our maritime museum, now faced with a move to too-small quarters? It would seem an apt solution to the fate of the ship and the museum, and the success of the Star of India in San Diego as an old barque used as a museum provides an example of the feasibility of the idea. It has always seemed a shame that our intensely interesting maritime collection appears to be struggling to survive year after year while projects of less merit seem to be given financial support, and if it were housed in an interesting setting it might prove a greater tourist attraction. — Mrs. E. Simpson, 110 King George Terrace.

Clarification

On September 25, the Times reported I had resigned from the Arts Access steering committee. There are three points I feel need clarifying. First of all, the committee was established to ensure the government followed policy guidelines set down in the six resolutions agreed on by the arts access conference.

Consequently my second point — I have never called for a guaranteed income for artists only, which unfortunately was stated in the Times article.

In fact I helped write one of the six major resolutions passed by the conference part of which states that "culture embodies all that relates to the realization of the individual's full potential and therefore the resources of the province both financial and otherwise be made available to meet these needs on a continuing basis, and that this be the foundation of cultural policy, departmental or otherwise."

This resolution has been totally ignored by the committee, even though it is imperative that, "we must return the problem solving capacity to the individual, or else suffer the consequences of a world where people are further alienated from their own growth and self-actualizing process." — G. O. Williams.

Clearly I could not continue to support a committee that sees culture in terms of the development of artists only and mere entertainment i.e. (bread and circuses) for the rest of us.

Finally committee members never agreed to the abolition of community arts councils. What we agreed to was the abolition of control by the councils over funds and policy.—Rients van Goudoever, Box 694, Sooke.

PARIS — Remarkable tales of novel engines of war are appearing in all parts of Europe but nothing has yet equalled the reports circulated concerning new guns used by the French forces which fire turpinite, a substance said to produce instantaneous and painless death for every living thing within its reach. Although it is so deadly in its work, turpinite cannot be objected to on the ground that it violates humane principles of war. In fact it is so humane it must not be confused with lyddite and other explosives which have deadly fumes.

Bringing the Tension Back Home

By JON NORDHEIMER
New York Times News

GILROY, Calif. — Home.

For nearly six years of exile in Canada as an American military deserter, Gary Della Bitta had thought of little else.

So it was disconcerting that his first hours of homecoming back in the two-bedroom frame house on Rosanna Street were filled with a tension he had carried with him from Vancouver.

He was one of the first to leave Canada and accept the conditions of President Ford's amnesty program. Now he was back home in Gilroy, a farm centre in the Santa Clara Valley of Central California about 80 miles south of San Francisco, and he was later surprised at how irritable he was when he first walked in the front door and saw the photograph.

"What's that?" he asked, his voice rising. He had taken a few steps into the living room, stopped dead in his tracks, and his brown eyes nearly drove a hole in the wall opposite the front door.

Midway up the wall, in a cluster of family pictures, was a color photograph of him in the olive green dress uniform of the United States Army.

"I don't believe it, you gotta be kidding," he exclaimed and advanced in quick, cat-like steps and snatched the framed photograph from the wall.

Just as quickly, his mother retrieved the picture from his hands and returned it to its hook, and placed her body between the smiling photograph and her frowning son.

"It's still Gary, I don't care what he's wearing," she said, seeking support from a relative, Mary Fortina, who stood with arms folded near the entrance to the kitchen, looking amused. "It's a nice picture, the uniform doesn't matter," Mrs. Della Bitta said over her son's shoulder to her husband, Cody, a quiet man, who lingered at the front door. Mrs. Della Bitta studied the feeling.

Later, everyone laughed about the incident, and the photograph remained on the wall where Mrs. Della Bitta wanted it.

After all that had happened, the long years of uncertainty and doubt, the languishing mood of the long grey Vancouver winters, he had thought that his convictions would be fully understood, most of all by those who loved him and knew him best, but the first few days back in Gilroy produced little moments of frustration as communications broke down and efforts to fill the long pauses were awkward as individuals groped for the right words to convey precisely the elusive emotions that had visited the house on Rosanna Street.

Many of the boys in Gary's class of '64 served in Vietnam. Two were killed, Gary, as far as can be determined, was the only war resister who went to Canada.

Why he alone took the path to Canada is a difficult and complex subject that only the friends who lost contact with him after high school attempt to explain easily.

"Gary was a very sensitive kid and his attitudes toward authority were different from the rest of us," remarked Scott Eustis, a backcourt star of the 1964 Gilroy basketball team, who now practices veterinary medicine in Fort Collins, Colo. "I'm certain that the war in Vietnam didn't have a durn thing to do with his desertion. He probably couldn't stand the Army and the way they have of trying to break down individualism."

Mike Kennedy, another team member who went on to earn a law degree and now helps run his father's lumber business in Gilroy, saw it similarly. "he was pretty much of a loner, but I never knew him to have a lack of guts, so I just figured he couldn't put up with the whole Army trip and it would have bugged the hell out of him whether there was a war or not."

Eustis and Kennedy, who were not drafted because of medical or student deferments, both said in interviews that war resisters should be compelled to serve alternative service because "it wouldn't be fair to the guys who went to Vietnam" or it would impair national security in case of a future military emergency.

This contrasts sharply with the feelings of some of Gary's friends who did serve in Vietnam.

Before he went AWOL, the only illegal thing Gary Della Bitta had done in 22 years was to fish out of season, he said while preparing to travel to Indiana this week for processing before final discharge from the Army. He was on the honor role in high school, he said, and had a 3.5 scholastic average in college before the pressures of the draft distracted him from his studies in biology, his major.

Political awareness came after induction and basic training when he angered his sergeants by refusing to sing training songs that went like, "I wanna go to Vietnam and kill a Vietcong!" But when he applied for conscientious objector status, it was denied him and he was sent to the Catholic chaplain who "told me God would watch over me and not to worry because we had the best military machine in the world," he said. "He showed me a film of what it was like to fight for your country."

His older brother Larry had fought through the same country for one year in the Mekong Delta, and "even today he still jumps when he hears a car backfire," Gary said.

When Gary deserted he had the support of his family and that support has not wavered through six years of absence. "if a veteran of Vietnam went against these boys and says they shouldn't have unconditional amnesty," said his father, a ranger at Mt. Madonna Park on the coastal range that overlooks Gilroy, "I'd respect his judgment. But so far I haven't met any."

After a few uneventful days, as it appeared that his home town had no bitterness for him, the native son repacked a bag and flew to Indiana, looking ahead to the task of constructing a new life at the age of 28.

SHAKING OFF THE STARDUST

By ANTHONY LEWIS

At his confirmation hearings a year ago, Secretary of State Kissinger was asked his view of CIA covert operations. He replied in terms of American values: "I would say that our genius does not reside in clandestine activities on a broad scale." He added the caveat that he thought it would be dangerous to abolish "certain types of these activities."

Another public expression of Kissinger's views on interference in other countries was former president Nixon's speech of last June 5, warning against too strong American support for the cause of Soviet Jews and dissenters. The voice was the voice of Nixon, but the hands were surely the hands of Kissinger:

"We would not welcome the intervention of other countries in our domestic affairs, and we cannot expect them to be co-operative when we seek to intervene directly in theirs. We cannot gear our foreign policy to transformation of other societies."

While opposing intervention in behalf of freedom in the Soviet Union, we now know, Kissinger presided over a program of subversion that helped turn Chile from democracy to tyranny. He did so not with his public attitude of concern for American values and respect for national sovereignty but with an arrogant assumption of the right to determine the fate of other societies. He reportedly told the Forty Committee, which controls secret activities abroad:

"I don't see why we need to stand by and watch a country go Communist due to the irresponsibility of its own people."

The point of reciting the record is not to catch Kissinger in some more dissembling. Anyone who cares knows by now that that is his nature. Even after the Chile caper was exposed, he could not resist misrepresenting its character when he urged Congressional leaders not to restrain covert operations. He is like Humpty Dumpty, who said in a rather scornful tone: "When I use a word, it means just what I chose it to mean — neither more nor less."

The need, rather, is for the country to see Kissinger whole, without stardust in his eyes. Along with his undoubted brilliance as a negotiator there come defects that are increasingly apparent and that require correction elsewhere.

Two thoughtful appraisals of the Kissinger record have just appeared. One, written for The Boston Globe, by Richard Holbrooke, managing editor of the magazine Foreign Policy. The other, in the current Atlantic, is by Thomas L. Hughes, president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Holbrooke hails Kissinger's ability, calling him "the most succesful diplomat in American history," but puts a critical focus on his methods and values.

He can manoeuvre effectively, Holbrooke suggests, because he operates without limits of principle or conviction. In the Vietnam negotiations, for example, he "was wholly free of any constraint based on a set of moral beliefs." Nor does he let "human beings interfere with policy." Some of his former associates "consider him wholly without feeling for human suffering."

And he is "obsessively secretive." His aim is to remove the constraint of what Holbrooke calls America's "natural and healthy taste for open debate." He keeps anyone else from sharing in the real work of foreign pblicy.

There is no visible political substitute for Kissinger. But other institutions, in Congress and the executive, must reassert other values and other interests than his. We cannot let Kissinger alone define America's genius and the world's concerns.

Pandora's Box of Patriotism

When the East German national anthem "Arisen from Ruins" was played this month (on October 7) for the 25th anniversary of the German Democratic Republic; the birthday guests could hum but under no circumstances sing the words.

The key line in the first stanza, 'Let us serve you well Germany, united Fatherland," is no longer in tune with the retrenchment policy of the East German Communists. As the GDR celebrates in prosperity and basks in its newly-found acceptance by the family of nations, the leadership is in no mood to reopen the Pandora's box labelled "Deutschland."

In fact, the word "Germany" has been struck from virtually all but the title of the ruling Socialist Unity Party of Germany and its main newspaper, Neues Deutschland. Only a few days before the festivities, the Government decreed changes in the 1968 Constitution that amounted to a wholesale eradication of the term "German nation." Although the late Walter Ulbricht hardly looked like a glowing nationalist when he ruled East Germany, with hindsight he now seems more and more like a post-war Bismarck compared with his successor, Erich Honecker.

An old Central European saying, however, goes: "The louder the drums roll, the more sound it is they drown." East Germans may not be talking or even thinking much about a united Germany, but there is no doubt — least of all to East Europeans — that they act as if the GDR is part of a much larger German entity that ineludes West Germany.

East Germans may scream out their lungs for the East German football team playing West Germany, but when West Germany plays anyone else then the sympathies of East Germans are on its side. East Germans will defend their system in interminable debates with West Germans, but when they travel to other socialist countries they go to extreme lengths to display GDR nationality stickers on their cars instead of the D sign (for Deutschland) used by West Germans.

German patriotism has had a hard time of it in the GDR since the country's creation. To some extent, it finds an outlet through pride in the GDR, but an insufficient one.

One is constantly discovering hidden pockets of nationalism where one would least expect them: among young East Germans and among the technocrats who run the economy. In most cases it is nourished by the belief that East Germans have been robbed of their just rewards by the enforced ties with the Soviet Union. Increasingly, it is "in" among young East Germans to sing forbidden university songs of the old German duelling fraternities and some of the marching songs of the former German Army.

East Germans are probably no more nationalistic than are West Germans, a result of the searing Nazi experience. However, the official suppression of even the most harmless expressions of unity with Germans in the West has given such matters a weight they would not otherwise have.

The Government of the GDR has pulled out all stops to celebrate the 25th anniversary. New coins are being issued bearing the Lincolnesque inscription: "Everything with the people, everything for the people." A grandiose white marble and tinted glass Palace of the Republic is taking shape in the heart of East Berlin where the royal palace once stood. Among other features it will contain one of Europe's biggest discotheques, a decided concession to the industrious youth of East Germany, and a coffee house where more sedate East Berliners can take their cakes and whipped cream.

Medals and money prizes are being distributed in enormous numbers to everyone from the meritorious milker from a collective farm to the residents of Block 24 in Weissensee, East Berlin "for exemplary order and safety" in tending their 17,000 square metres of lawn.

Composers have been commissioned to compose birthday songs, such as the new one about the flag:

"Not the wind which whips it
Makes our flag so beautiful.
Not the fluttering in the breeze
Makes us follow behind it.
Not its glow and its rays
Move our hearts to beat faster.
No, it's the red of the worker's flag
Borne high by the right bearer
That makes it so beautiful.
Then all our comrades follow it
To the revolution against war and profits."

Unlike China, very few people in East Germany ever seem to learn these texts or melodies, though they nonetheless provide regular work for an entire song-writing industry. Meanwhile, East Germans are provided with a steady diet of news about the impending collapse of capitalism in West Germany and elsewhere.

"It cannot happen quickly enough for me," says one East Berliner wryly. "Then there wouldn't be a single reason left for not allowing us out to witness the final destruction of the old order."

Fernwood Looks to LIP Grant To Finance a Drop-In Centre

The future of the Fernwood Community Association is strongly tied to the group obtaining funds either through LIP or the human resources branch.

With or without funding the organization will carry on, "but it will not and cannot achieve anything worthwhile for the community," says president Hans Frederiksen.

They have applied for a Local Initiatives Project grant of up to $18,000.

With this type of funding the community association hopes to open a drop-in centre, hire a co-ordinator to organize and mobilize volunteers, revitalize the Fernwood News and create an awareness of the community association.

Frederiksen says they should hear by the end of November if the grant has been approved by the federal government.

Also, it is expected application will be made to thhe provincial human resources branch to hire a community development worker through the neighborhood advisory committee (a group set up by the human resources to respond to area needs and wishes).

But this type of funding would not be available until April, 1975.

"We can do a lot of things for the area . . . but first we have to contact the people to let them know there is something they can do and something being done for them."

Frederiksen is pinning a lot of hope on a drop-in centre. He sees it as a place to be used by young and old, not necessarily at the same time.

"We have a lot of older people. They are free in the day and would be doing things best suited for them. At night it's different; the older ones want to stay home and it's the youngsters who want to do something."

Frederiksen would like to see the older persons form a group of their own but one which is attached to the community association.

He wants a drop-in centre as a place where all will mix — those of different ages and also of different nationalities.

"We just want everyone to get involved . . . first by setting up a block system and getting people to know their own neighbors and then a place central for all.

"A place where ideas can be generated and then put those ideas into action."

The executive of the community association decided at its last meeting to drop plans for a plebiscite on the pub question as City Hall will be holding a hearing sometime in November.

"All we would be doing is duplicating what is already being done. Two petitions are being circulated and both will be given to council," says Frederiksen.

Those wishing to participate in or join the association can contact Frederiksen at 383-2738 or at 1325 Vining.

Provincial Election Now Bennett's Answer to NDP

VANCOUVER (CP) — Opposition Leader Bill Bennett said Wednesday a provincial election should be called immediately.

He said at a news conference that "although it is not the best time for the Social Credit to fight an election, it would be in the best interests of the people of British Columbia to bring competence to government."

Bennett was replying to a challenge by Premier Dave Barrett to show what the Socreds would do differently in government. Premier Barrett issued the challenge in a speech Tuesday in Nelson.

Bennett said a Social Credit government would:

—Repeal the controversial Mineral Royalties Act and before introducing new mining legislation conduct a Royal Commission into government revenues relating to the mining industry;

—take the province out of stock market investment charging the Barrett government has already lost $10 million with its investments in B.C. Tel stock;

—Stop government ownership in the forestry industry;

—Return competition into the automobile insurance business and discard Insurance Corporation of B.C. driver's certificates.

The Socred leader saved most of his criticism for ICBC, which he said does "neither of the two things the government said it would—provide service and offer cheaper rates."

He said premiums were "based on flying by the seat of their (government's) pants" and declared that taxpayers should participate in the success of a business but not share in its losses.

Projected first-year losses for the government insurance corporation have been estimated as high as $100 million.

"The people of B.C. are waiting for the opportunity to replace this government," said Bennett.

Current standings in the 55-seat legislature are New Democratic Party 38, Social Credit 10, Liberal 5 and Conservative 2.

PANTYHOSE SAVES

VANCOUVER (CP)—Pantyhose may have saved $8 million worth of electronic equipment a spokesman for British Columbia Tel said Wednesday.

Dozens of pairs of pantyhose were filled with silica gel and used to mop up water that flooded long-distance equipment Tuesday.

"We are concerned about corrosion," said a company spokesman. "But it may be several months before we know the full effects. So far, there doesn't appear to have been any permanent damage."

The water came when a fire valve was activated by vibrations from a jackhammer being used by a construction worker next door.

Hairdryers, fans and the pantyhose were all used in the makeshift mop-up operation. The company said the dryers might be raffled among employees.

'New' Oil Definition Incentive

EDMONTON (CP) — The provincial government's definition of "new" and "old" oil for the purpose of calculating royalties may offer some incentive for new drilling programs, says Don Baker, vice-president of marketing for Numac Oil and Gas Ltd.

He was referring to a letter sent last week to oil companies from the provincial mines and minerals department.

The definition of new and old oil was necessitated after the Alberta government introduced a new royalty structure designed to absorb part of a $2.70-a-barrel increase in the price of oil.

The structure involved a provincial government royalty of 65 per cent on the incremental price increase on old oil — oil reserves developed prior to April 1, 1974. The royalty on the price increase for oil reserves developed after that time was an average of 35 per cent.

But the industry pointed to problems in determining old and new oil where additional drilling extended existing reserves, or where gas injection systems were introduced to improve recovery.

The information letter says "crude oil production will be regarded as old oil for the purpose of royalty calculations until an application by the operator for new oil or co-existing oil status is approved by the minister."

The letter says producers can apply for the lower roy

CZ

Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. reports earnings of $16.1 million or $2.02 a share for the first nine months of 1974, down from $21.5 million or $2.71 a share in the same period last year.

Despite the decreased earnings, the company reported sales increased to $248.2 million in the nine months, compared to $221.9 million last year.

Net earnings for the third quarter were $4.2 million or 53 cents a share compared to $7.5 million or 94 cents a share in the third quarter last year.

President Robert Rogers said in a news release the decreased earnings were due to slumping lumber and plywood markets and increased production costs.

Inland

Inland Natural Gas Co. Ltd. reports that gas sales revenue in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1974, was 20 per cent higher than the previous year, but net income for the two periods was almost unchanged.

Gas sales revenue was $28,320,363 to June 30 compared with $23,548,295 the previous year. Total revenue was $29,193,229 compared with $24,210,366.

Net income was $3,889,528 or $1.24 a common share compared with $3,883,231 or $1.23 cents a common share.

During the last fiscal year the company connected 5,746 meters in its service area, setting a new high for customer additions in a single year.

Inland paid dividends of 72 cents during the year, up from 69 cents.

"We were able to maintain net earnings despite average temperatures 3 per cent warmer than the previous year and certain labor unrest which curtailed industrial sales," said the report by chairman Ronald Cliff and president Robert Kadlec.

United Research

United Research and Development Consolidated Ltd. reports a net profit of $130,900 on sales of $5.8 million for the year ended July 31, compared with a profit of $83,350 on sales of $2 million for the year ended July 31, 1973.

United Research is a holding company whose subsidiary, Delta Smelting and Refining Co. Ltd., refines precious metals in Richmond.

The auditor's report to the shareholders notes the company is trying to recover $89,590 in advance royalties for the use of a process it has decided not to proceed with.

President David Seed said the directors have decided not to pay any dividend until the company eliminated its capital deficit which amounted to $111,550 at year-end.

Seed said it has been difficult to plan in view of the fluctuations in gold and silver prices and added that the company is looking at different avenues to increase sales.

Shares of the company now trade on the Vancouver curb exchange at about 30 cents.

Woodward

Woodward Stores Ltd. has declared total dividends for 1974 of 73 cents, three cents more than in 1973.

In 1973, the company paid a spring dividend of 45 cents and an October dividend of 25 cents, making a total of 70 cents.

The April dividend this year was also 45 cents, while there was a dividend of 28 cents, payable Oct. 31, making the 1974 total 73 cents.

The Canadian Press earlier distributed an erroneous report saying the October dividend of 28 cents was a decrease of 17 cents.

$ EXCHANGE

In Victoria today purchase of U.S. funds in terms of Canadian dollars was .9740 U.S. by the Royal Bank with .9745 for cheques and .9640 for coin. Selling rates were .9845 for cheques and .9850 for cash.

MONTREAL (CP) — U.S. dollar in terms of Canadian funds at noon today was down 1-5 at 50.97 49-50. Pound sterling was down 1 59-100 at $2.27 73-100.

In New York, the Canadian dollar was up 1-50 at $1.02 3-50. Pound sterling was down 1 3-5 at $2.32 2-5.

Prisoner Passes to End

VANCOUVER (CP) — The penitentiary service will soon stop issuing temporary passes to prisoners, Jean-Paul Gilbert of the National Parole Board said Wednesday.

The penitentiary service and the parole service are being amalgamated, and parole officers will be sitting in on all future releases of prisoners, he said during an interview while attending a two-day workshop. Representatives of local police forces and with representatives from the parole and penitentiary services are at the workshop.

A series of meetings are being held across the country in an attempt to develop closer communication and consultation between police and correctional services.

Victoria police chief John Gregory, president of chiefs' association, said he was glad to hear of the amalgamation move because unwise release of prisoners by the penitentiary service has long been a sore point with law enforcement officers in this country.

Gregory called for an end to the practice of foreing parolees to report to police headquarters in their community.

"Police officers basically are trained for law enforcement not parole work," he said.

He said the only information police need is the location of the parolee and the terms of his parole so he could be brought in if he breaks parole.

Gilbert said, however, that the workshops have indicated that some police departments favor parole supervision by police officers.

Spies Increasing

INDIANAPOLIS (Reuter) — Clarence Kelley, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, says Communist spying in the United States is on the increase and pledged unrelenting vigilance against it.

Area Plan Hearings Next

The regional plan passed second reading without debate at the Capital Region Board meeting Wednesday, leaving the way clear for a series of public meetings to be held on the plan.

Saanich and Sidney regional directors said they wanted the plan to go to public hearing and would save their objections until after the meetings.

The public meetings will be at 1:30 and 7:30 p.m. Oct. 22. No place for the hearings has been selected.

Sewer Referendum Stalled

The on-again-off-again View Royal sewer referendum has been postponed indefinitely because of residents' worries about sewer costs and amalgamation of the area.

View Royal regional director Pat Massy told Capital Region Board directors Wednesday that residents were disturbed about the impact of sewers on the area and recommended that the bylaw allowing the referendum be delayed.

The referendum was first to be held in October, but was put off until November so residents could be informed of the costs of installation.

Mrs. Massy said Wednesday it was "foolish" to go ahead with the referendum until the question of amalgamation was answered. It is possible that View Royal will be lumped in with either Esquimalt or a new municipality formed by the joining of Colwood and Langford.

Board chairman Jim Campbell supported Mrs. Massy's recommendation saying the referendum could be unnecessarily defeated if held now.

LIBRARY PLAN ACCEPTABLE

The Capital Region Board will willingly take over the function of regional library services, if the five municipalities involved want it to, board chairman Jim Campbell said Wednesday.

"I see no reason to oppose the regional board acting as an agent for its components, if they want it to," Campbell said.

"If that's what they want, they're going to get it."

But, Campbell said, the board must be assured by the present components of the Greater Victoria Library Board, that they want the region to take over library services.

He told representatives of the library board at a regional board meeting Wednesday, that they were going about seeking regionalization in the wrong way and suggested they appear before the intermunicipal committee to present their views.

Under the provincial Library Development Commission, if the Greater Victoria Library Board, composed of Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Central Saanich, is taken over by the region, the provincial government will grant 20 per cent of the board's annual budget.

Library board secretay Don Miller said that if the 20 per cent grant system had been in effect this year, the library board would have received $350,047 from the provincial government, instead of $76,581.

Under the regional system, the electoral area of View Royal could be included, if residents voted in favor of joining the regional system.

Woman Recalls Tragedy

A Victoria woman will return this month to the country where her husband was stoned to death 25 years ago.

Lorna Dabbs of 101-1410 Fort leaves Oct. 18 for Bolivia where she will spend at least three months visiting and speaking to christians.

She and her husband Norman had been missionaries in Bolivia for nine years until the night of Aug. 8, 1949, when he was killed by Indians in the town of Melcamaya.

Seven other people were also killed by the mob, which Mrs. Dabbs said was incited by a Roman Catholic priest.

Mrs. Dabbs returned to Canada with her four children and hasn't been back since.

The trip is being financed by the Emmanuel Baptist Church and other friends.

Commissioning service for Mrs. Dabbs will be Sunday at 7 p.m. at Emmanuel Baptist Church.

The Rentalsman and you.

On October 1st, the Government of British Columbia proclaimed a new Landlord and Tenant Act governing the rights and obligations involved in landlord/tenant relationships. What follows on this page, is a very simple summary of those new laws, and what they mean to you the landlord, and you the tenant.
While this is only a summary, and does not cover all the laws found in the new Landlord and Tenant Act, it does deal with the questions most commonly asked. This page will be of value to you as a piece of reference material, well worth clipping and saving.
For purposes of interpreting and applying the law in more detail, the Act itself should be consulted. Copies of the Act are available at nominal cost from the Queen's Printer, Parliament Buildings, Victoria, B. C.

The Office of the Rentalsman

The laws contained in the new Landlord and Tenant Act of British Columbia govern relationships between landlords and tenants who rent residential premises. The Act clearly defines many of the rights and obligations of both parties.

Misunderstandings may still arise, however, and it is for this reason that the government has established the rentalsman — to act as ombudsman and mediator in landlord-tenant disputes, and to provide prompt decisions.

The services of the rentalsman are free, and can save both landlords and tenants lengthy and costly legal action. Questions can be directed by phone, by mail or in person.

What Is Covered By the Landlord and Tenant Act?

The Act applies generally to all dwelling units used for residential premises (including mobile homes and land that is rented for mobile homes), but it does not apply to non-profit co-operatives, or nursing home facilities licensed by the Department of Health.

Tenancy Agreements

A tenancy agreement is the contract between the landlord and tenant about the rent, services, privileges and restrictions respecting the residential premises reached when the tenant agrees to rent the premises from the landlord.

A tenancy agreement doesn't have to be in writing. A written agreement is advantageous to landlord and tenant in the event of a subsequent dispute, but a verbal agreement is a valid agreement. Whatever the form of agreement, it may be changed only when both landlord and tenant agree to the change.

Any term of an agreement which takes away the rights of either party given by the Act is void.

A landlord can include any reasonable obligation or restriction in a tenancy agreement. If there is doubt whether a restriction or obligation is reasonable, the rentalsman should be consulted.

Where the tenancy agreement is in writing, the landlord must give a copy of the agreement to the tenant within 21 days. Until he receives such a copy, the tenant has no obligation to honor any part of the agreement, including the payment of rent.

Terminating A Tenancy Agreement — Giving Notice

A notice of termination from either the landlord or the tenant must be in writing, must include the address of the premises, must specify the day on which the premises are to be vacated (the termination date), and it must be signed. It is recommended that the landlord also outline his reasons for giving notice.

The termination date must be set one day before the day on which the rent is due.

In a month-to-month tenancy, where the tenant pays rent every month, notice must be given not less than 30 days before the termination date.

In a week-to-week tenancy, notice must be given not less than 28 days before the termination date and, again, the date must be set one day before a rent payment day.

Where a tenancy agreement is for a specified period of time, such as a year, unless the landlord gives 30 days notice of termination, or a new tenancy agreement is entered into, the tenancy agreement becomes a month-to-month tenancy.

There are some exceptions to these rules. For example, if the landlord requires the premises for himself, his wife, children, parents or in-laws, 60 days notice must be given to the tenant. Other exceptions are discussed under the headings "Reasons for Termination" and "Conversions from Rental Accommodation".

A tenant can deliver written notice to the landlord personally or by ordinary mail.

A landlord must attempt to deliver a written notice to the tenant or if this cannot be done, a notice may be given to an adult apparently residing with the tenant; by certified or registered mail, or by posting the notice up on the tenant's door, or in some place where the tenant would be sure to see it.

A tenant who receives a notice of termination may require that the landlord give him detailed reasons in writing within the next two days. The tenant may dispute the termination by giving notice to the rentalsman, not less than 15 days before the termination date specified. The rentalsman will then decide if the termination is justified.

Reasons For Termination

A landlord cannot arbitrarily terminate a tenancy agreement. He must have a valid reason. The tenant may appeal to the rentalsman to determine whether or not the reason is justified. A landlord may terminate a tenancy agreement if:

- A tenant fails to pay rent owing within five days after receipt of a notice of demand from the landlord.
- A tenant or his guest(s) disturb other tenants in the building.
- A tenant damages the premises beyond reasonable wear and tear.
- The landlord requires the premises for his own use, for the use of his wife, child, parents or in-laws.
- The premises are going to be demolished.
- The premises are to be converted to condominium or co-operative housing, or if the landlord intends to enter into a lease arrangement of more than three years.
- The tenant knowingly misrepresents the premises to a prospective tenant or purchaser.
- The tenancy agreement is for residential premises in a hotel, motel, etc., or if the agreement clearly stipulates a seasonal arrangement and a termination date.
- The premises become occupied by a person under 19 years of age, contrary to the tenancy agreement.
- The premises become occupied by a larger number of persons under 19 years of age than was agreed upon in the tenancy agreement.
- The tenant or his guest(s) endanger the safety of the landlord or other tenants.
- The tenant is an employee whose residential premises were provided by the employer and are withdrawn upon the termination of employment.
- An unreasonable number of persons are occupying the premises.

There is one special circumstance in which the tenant cannot dispute the landlord's notice of termination. The tenant does not have this right if the landlord has already applied for and obtained the rentalsman's written consent to the termination. The rentalsman will give this consent only where the landlord satisfies him that the tenant's conduct is severely disturbing the peace or endangering the safety of neighbouring tenants or is causing extraordinary damage to the premises.

Conversions from Rental Accommodation

It has already been mentioned that a landlord can terminate a tenancy agreement because he is going to convert the premises into a condominium or co-operative or enter into a tenancy agreement for more than three years. When this occurs, the landlord must have the approval of the municipality where the premises are located, and he must give the tenant 120 days notice of termination. Where the building is to be demolished, 120 days notice is also required. The landlord must also pay the tenant's moving expenses up to $300.

In this situation, the tenant may decide to vacate before the termination date specified by the landlord. If so, he must give the landlord notice of the day he intends to leave and such notice must be given to the landlord no later than 10 days prior to the termination date specified by the landlord. The tenant must pay rent up to the date he leaves the premises.

Rent Increase

An increase in rent in respect to a particular residential premises may not take place more than once every 12 months, regardless of a change in the landlord or tenant.

A landlord must give the tenant written notice of such increase at least three months in advance.

Any reduction in services or a charge for services formerly supplied free to a tenant is considered a rent increase, unless the rentalsman orders otherwise.

Non-Payment of Rent

When a tenant fails to pay his rent, the landlord may deliver to him a written demand for payment. This demand is to be delivered between the seventh and twentieth day following the day on which the rent was payable.

If the tenant has not paid within five days of receiving the written demand, the landlord may give the tenant a notice of termination. In a week-to-week tenancy, termination may occur on the tenth day following the receipt of the written demand. In all other tenancies, termination may occur on the last day of the rental period for which the landlord has not been paid.

A landlord may not seize the personal possessions of a tenant for non-payment of rent.

Standards of Maintenance

A landlord has an obligation to keep the premises he rents in a condition which meets health and safety standards. He must also maintain the premises in a reasonable and acceptable state of repair and decoration, in keeping with the age, character and location of the premises.

The tenant has an obligation to keep the premises in a condition which satisfies ordinary standards of cleanliness and to repair any damage he or his guest cause by negligence or wilful acts.

Failure by either party to meet these obligations is a breach of the tenancy agreement.

Either party can call upon the rentalsman to determine whether or not the other party is meeting his obligations.

If the rentalsman determines that the tenant has caused extraordinary damage, he could order the tenant's immediate eviction.

If the rentalsman determines that the landlord is not maintaining proper standards or providing essential services, he may order the tenant to pay rent directly to the rentalsman, and use the funds to pay for the needed repairs, maintenance or services. Unless the rentalsman orders otherwise, a tenant must continue to pay his rent.

UNDER NO CIRCUMSTANCES SHOULD RENT BE SENT TO THE RENTALSMAN UNLESS IT IS ORDERED.

Rights of Privacy

(When may a landlord enter a tenant's premises?)

The general rule.

A landlord may enter the tenant's premises in an emergency, when he has reason to believe that the tenant has permanently abandoned the premises, or when the tenant consents.

Under most other circumstances, the landlord must give the tenant 24 hours notice of his intention to enter and specify a time between 8 a.m. and 9 p.m.

Showing the premises to prospective tenants.

When a notice of termination has been given, the landlord may wish to show the premises to prospective tenants. Unless the tenant agrees to less notice, the landlord must give not less than eight hours notice in writing of his intention to show the premises.

Damage inspection after termination.

When the landlord gives a notice of termination, he must notify the tenant within 48 hours if he wishes to make a damage inspection. He must give the tenant at least eight hours notice of his intention to enter, and he can only inspect for damage within 36 hours of that notice of entry.

The landlord may make only one damage inspection, and it must be between 8 a.m. and 9 p.m. unless the tenant agrees otherwise.

Locks

A landlord or tenant may not change the lock on the tenant's door without mutual consent.

Only in an emergency involving a threat to security may the landlord change the lock on the main door of the building.

Who May Enter Residential Premises?

A landlord must allow political candidates or their canvassers to enter a residential building.

A landlord cannot refuse entrance to invited guests of his tenants.

Subletting

Except in the case of public housing, a tenant may sublet premises if the tenancy is for a term of six months or longer. The landlord's consent must be obtained, but a landlord may not unreasonably withhold his consent.

No other tenant can sublet unless the tenancy agreement so provides, or unless his landlord consents to the subletting.

General

Under no circumstances may a landlord or his agent forcibly remove or lock out a tenant from the tenant's residential premises.

Unless a residential premises has been abandoned, a landlord may not remove a tenant's possessions.

Tenants in our province are now eligible for a renters' resource grant of $80 if they are 65 years or over.

Tenants under 65 are eligible for a grant of $30.

Application forms are available at government agencies throughout the province or from the Department of Housing, Renters Resource Grant Branch, 827 Fort Street, Victoria, B.C.

Any person who knowingly or wilfully fails to abide by the Landlord and Tenant Act or a decision of the rentalsman is guilty of an offence.

Most landlord-tenant misunderstandings can be resolved by the application of common sense and courtesy. If you have a serious problem, and if you don't find the answer here or in the Act, please contact:

Pitching Gives Title to A's

BALTIMORE (AP)—Oakland A's go after their third straight World Series baseball championship with ailing Reggie Jackson and the team's sluggers in a slump.

But the resourceful A's manage somehow to score, and they still have magnificent pitching to use against Los Angeles Dodgers. Both were apparent in the 2-1 victory over Baltimore Orioles which gave Oakland the American League pennant, three games to one.

The A's scored their first run on four consecutive walks in the fifth inning and another in the seventh on their lone hit, a double by Jackson following another of the 11 walks off Mike Cuellar and Ross Grimsley.

Winning pitcher Jim (Catfish) Hunter and reliever Rollie Fingers held the Orioles to five hits, with Baltimore finally ending a 30-inning scoring drought on Boog Powell's ninth-inning hit.

The A's pitching is what impressed Earl Weaver, the Baltimore manager. He predicted it would enable Oakland to join the 1936-39 and the 1949-53 New York Yankees as the only teams ever to win three World Series in a row.

"Pitching dominated the playoffs," Weaver said. "But that's the way we got into it, the way they got into it, and the way they're going to win the World Series."

After banging three home runs to beat Hunter 6-3 in the series opener, the Orioles scored only one more run. Through the fifth inning of the final game, they had gone 15 innings without advancing a runner beyond first base.

The A's weren't much better at the plate as they battled a Baltimore pitching staff which Oakland owner Charles O. Finley had feared would be tough to beat.

Jackson, playing the final three games as a designated hitter while hobbled with a pulled hamstring muscle in his right leg, had two hits in the four games.

Oakland's other three top run producers, all of whom knocked in 73 runs or more during the regular season, didn't fare much better.

Sal Bando did have two homers among his three hits, and his first homer won the third game 1-0. Joe Rudi was limited to two hits and Gene Tenace went 0-for-11.

Year of the Canucks In the CSD CCC NHL

Another National Hockey League season is underway and the only real problem is remembering which team is playing in which division of which conference, and what happens when it's all over.

It's a brand new barrel of wax this year, but keep cool, it will all come out in the spring. And just wait until the playoffs. Twelve teams will qualify out of 18 . . . and isn't that something?

At any rate Vancouver Canucks who trained here this fall in a bid to be recognized, are absolutely certain to improve. That isn't any idle prediction. It's fact. For the Canucks who finished sixth, seventh, seventh and seventh, in their first four years, can finish no worse than fifth this season, and actually are aiming at second with a good chance to get it. Wild ravings? Never! Canucks are in a division with only five clubs now, if you want the designation, hang on. They are a member of the Connie Smythe division of the Clarence Campbell Conference, which henceforth will be referred to as the CSD CCC NHL or, for brevity, the CSCCNHL.

Their opposition is Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, Minnesota. Coach Phil Maloney made much of the fact earlier that he would coach the Canucks this season only with an eye on Minnesota and St. Louis. He was conceding Chicago first place and newcomer Kansas City, last, and figured by beating, or matching the performances of, Minnesota and St. Louis, presto, the Canucks would be in their first playoff. Which they would.

Many Are Hal's Team Too

But can they get by these two teams? Not off last season they can't, and it's still to be proven they have improved that much in the off season. The newcomers are Leon Rochefort, 35, a veteran, goalie Ken Lockett from Baltimore and centre Jim Wiley from Pittsburgh. The lone rookie is Harold Snepts. Gone are Orland Kurtenbach, Don Tannahill, Richard Lemieux, Ed Dyck and Jacques Caron. Meanwhile, defenceman Bob Dailey is injured. If the Canucks then are basically the same, the most generous assessment is that their good young players from last season will be one year older, and more experienced. And if an independent appraisal is needed, former GM and coach Hal Laycoe said this week: "I think they are mostly my team and should do well."

In other words, there have been few basic changes since Laycoe left the scene, and if he is to be proven right this should be the year, and the year for coach Phil Maloney as well. Because he did help to put the club together, or maybe he stabilized it. So give the Canucks a shot at second. St. Louis with a youth movement under way and Minnesota also under-going change don't appear to have gained much stature. Kansas City? . . . well!

But that's only one-quarter of it. What of the LPCCNHL, and then that other outfit, the Prince of Wales Conference which has the Norris and the Adams divisions?

First the Lester Patrick Division of the CCNHL. That could be interesting with defending cup champions Philadelphia Flyers the favorites over New York Rangers, Atlanta Flames and New York Islanders. The fifth team doesn't join until next year, and just the way they have been mentioned is how they will finish too. The Flyers haven't lost anything, and actually should be stronger; the Rangers have unloaded a few veterans, and could get caught in a rebuilding alteration: Atlanta, despite good goalkeeping, doesn't appear in their class. The Islanders may be hard put to keep up.

Bruins, Habs Best Bets

There are some big guns in the Adams division of the Prince of Wales Conference. But unfortunately most of them appear to be on one team — the big, bad Bruins from Boston. The beantowners with a new coach Don Cherry should have it mostly their own way, although Toronto could prove to be the sleeper. The Leafs were coming on last year, and there's just the thought that it might all jell this year. Buffalo has lost coach Joe Crozier, still has the French Connection; but may have slipped back, while California should bring up the rear. But beware here, too; there have been signs of life in the Seals' pen.

So where's Montreal? In the Norris Division, silly! And it should be a cake-walk for the Habs. First, goalie Ken Dryden has returned, and that moves the Canadiens upright away. Secondly, there isn't that much to beat. And you can lump Los Angeles Kings, Pittsburgh and Detroit in the battle for second place, and take your pick. Washington Capitals are the new boys in that division and unlikely threats.

Plus some questions to be answered later: How will GM-coach Emile Francis fare if the Rangers don't, at New York? Will Bernie Parent perform more miracles for Philly or is Fred Shero really North America's answer to Russia's Boris Kulagin? Will Bep Guidolin find the happiness at Kansas City he couldn't at Boston? And will Don Cherry get the respect at Boston Guidolin didn't?

There now, that wasn't difficult, was it?

And the record so far . . . 998 right . . .

Jean Smith Keeps Title

Jean Smith retained her women's championship at Cedar Hill Golf Club with a one-up victory over 17-year-old Heather Stewart, who shot an 80 in the qualifying round to share medallist honors with Isabelle McGillivray. Consolation winner was Marjorie McConnan, who defeated Joan Moore.

Other results:

"B" Flight: Diana Bennett defeated Nora Bedwell.
"B" Consolation: Shirley Folsy defeated Jean Carey.
"C" Flight: Nellie Ross defeated Helen James.
"C" Consolation: Peggy Swallow defeated Helen Roberts.

Garvey, Sutton Spark L.A.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's an all-California World Series for the first time, and Steve Garvey says Los Angeles Dodgers wanted it that way.

"We said collectively that we want to play the best team," said Garvey, hitting star of the Dodgers' 12-1 victory Wednesday over Pittsburgh that gave Los Angeles its first National League baseball pennant in eight years.

"Oakland is the World Series champion and the American League champion again, so we have to beat them if we want to prove we are the best team in baseball."

The Dodgers—behind Garvey's two home runs and two singles, and Don Sutton's masterful pitching Wednesday — whipped the Pirates and won the best-of-five series three games to one. The two-time defending World Series champion A's eliminated Baltimore Orioles by the same margin in games for the American League crown.

The A's are expected to pitch Ken Holtzman, who blanked Baltimore last Sunday, and Los Angeles will open the series with Andy Messersmith, who beat Pittsburgh on Sunday, in Saturday afternoon's game at Dodger Stadium.

Dodger manager Walt Alston refused to draw a comparison between the Dodgers and A's because he hadn't studied scouting reports. "I don't know much about Oakland," he said.

The Pirates, who won the NL East title for the fourth time in the last five years, had no qualms about picking the Dodgers to win the World Series.

Said Pirate manager Danny Murtaugh.

"I don't predict the number of games the series will go. I'll root just as hard as any Dodger fan for them in the Series. It was a battle for the pennant up to now, and this is now a league vendetta."

"They out-hit us, out-pitched us and just out-played us, all the way around," said Pirate centre fielder Al Oliver. "They deserve to go to the World Series."

Sutton said he felt the Dodgers, despite a 2-1 lead, had their backs to the wall because Pittsburgh would have had momentum for a fifth game.

"However," Sutton added, "we would have had the best pitcher in the National League going for us."

He meant Messersmith, the right-hander who was 20-6 in the regular season.

Garvey and Jimmy Wynn both recalled having success against Holtzman before the left-hander was traded by Chicago Cubs to the A's.

"In 1970, or '71, when I first came up to the Dodgers, I hit my second home run off him. That's all I remember about him," said Garvey.

"I've had good success against him," said Wynn.

Islanders in Near Miss

By The Canadian Press

It took three seasons for New York Islanders to gain their first point at the Montreal Forum but Islanders coach Al Arbour thought his club should have had a win rather than a tie against Montreal Canadiens Wednesday night.

The Canadiens rallied for two power-play goals in the final two minutes of the third period to tie New York 5-5 in one of seven games scheduled for the opening night of the National Hockey League.

Meanwhile, Washington Capitals and Kansas City Scouts began their first season in the league with losses. The Scouts were beaten 6-2 by the Maple Leafs in Toronto while the Capitals dropped a 6-3 decision to New York Rangers.

Other action saw Pittsburgh Penguins defeat Minnesota North Stars 4-2, Detroit Red Wings edge Chicago Black Hawks 2-1, California Seals tie St. Louis Blues 4-4 and Vancouver Canucks battle to a 3-3 draw with Atlanta Flames.

Pete Mahovlich's third powerplay goal of the game with 37 seconds remaining gave Montreal the tie with New York. It came 57 seconds after Mahovlich's second goal with the Islanders playing two men short after Clark Gillies had received a double minor and Gerry Hart was given a penalty for boarding Yvan Cournoyer by referee Dave Newell at 17:42.

A goal by Dennis Ververgaert at 17:19 of the second period gave the Canucks their tie against the Flames. Larry Gouldand Dob Lever scored the other Vancouver goals while Hilliard Graves, Bob Leiter and Jacques Richard replied for the Flames.

The Rangers unleashed a 19-shot barrage at Capitals goalie Ron Low in the third period, scoring four goals, while Washington had a goal on its only shot at New York's Eddie Giacomin.

The Leafs fired 46 shots at Scouts goaltender Michel Plasse and one of the shots to beat him was Dave Keon's 350th goal which capped a four-goal outburst in the final period.

Guy Charron scored from a scramble in front of the net with 37 seconds remaining in the game to give the Red Wings the win. Danny Grant got the other Detroit goal with Ivan Boldirev scoring for Chicago.

Volleyball Tie Forced

Mt. Douglas moved up to create a three-way tie for second and Vic High edged a little further into the lead Wednesday in the Greater Victoria High School Boys' Volleyball League.

At Mt. Doug, the home team defeated Reynolds 15-13, 15-6 and then got past Dunsmuir 15-12, 9-15, 15-5 to climb into a tie with Dunsmuir and Oak Bay.

The Bays were beaten 15-1, 15-2 by Vic High, which also downed Claremont 16-14, 15-5.

In the other game, Claremont defeated Spectrum 15-8, 15-8.

Pacific on Forces Soccer Win Trail

Quebec and Halifax have emerged as the unbeaten sides after two days' play in the annual Canadian Forces soccer championships at Colville Road Park — but don't count defending champion CFB Esquimalt out just yet.

CFB Valcartier defeated Cold Lake, the Prairies representative from Alberta, 3-1 Wednesday while Halifax blanked CFB Borden of Ontario 2-0.

That gave the co-leader two straight wins but Esquimalt, powered by Bob Laws' three goals, defeated Baden-Lahr, the European representative, 4-2 to move into a tie for third with the Prairies.

Ray Reece scored the other goal for Esquimalt, the Pacific representative, while Danny Savory and Hank Morris scored for Baden-Lahr, which has former-Victorian Rick Charlton in goal.

The round-robin tournament continues until Saturday with a final set for Sunday if necessary.

Canadians Bow

FRANKFURT-ON-THE-ODER, East Germany (Reuter) — Canada, one of soccer's developing nations, was beaten, 2-0, by East Germany but emerged with much of the credit from a damp unmemorable international match Wednesday.

The meagre crowd of 2,000 whistled its disapproval when Hans-Juergen Doerner, all alone in the Canadian penalty area, popped the ball past goalkeeper Tony Chursky to give his side their flattering 2-0 victory.

Many thought Doerner was offside and there was widespread confusion when the Russian referee picked up the ball as to whether it was a goal or merely the end of the game. It turned out to be both.

Doyle Joins Lions

VANCOUVER (CP)—British Columbia Lions obtained veteran import linebacker Mickey Doyle from Calgary Stampeders Wednesday in a Canadian Football League trade.

Calgary will receive future considerations from the Lions at the end of the 1974 season.

The Lions plan to use him as as outside linebacker.

Cougars May Deal

Don't be surprised if Victoria Cougars and Calgary Centennials engineer a deal on the weekend.

Cougars open a 10-game Western Canada Junior Hockey League road trip against the Centennials Friday night. Calgary general manager Scotty Munro and Victoria manager-coach Pat Ginnell are expected to try to work out a trade that would send centre Derek Haas to the Cents in exchange for winger Lyle Murray and, possibly, additional players.

Haas told Ginnell at training camp he wasn't interested in playing hockey but Munro apparently has talked the 19-year-old into joining his club. Ginnell, meanwhile, says he won't hold Haas back if a deal can be arranged.

And Cougars are interested in Murray, who scored 38 goals and 33 assists for The Pas Red Devils of the Alberta Junior League last season.

Defenceman Lori Gloeckner returned to the Cougars today after walking out of training camp. Gloeckner, 18, played most of last year with Nanaimo Clippers of the B.C. Junior League.

In the only WCHL game Wednesday night, Edmonton Oil Kings edged Kamloops Chiefs 3-2 on goals by Robin Sadler, Paul Mulvey and Doug Johnston. Brad Gassoff got both Kamloops goals.

S.O.S. Signal Goes Out to Parents

THE SOCCER SCENE

By Max Low

Minor soccer has mushroomed.

Of that there is no doubt. Already there are more boys playing soccer on Vancouver Island and in B.C. than any other sport.

But there are headaches and a big one is related to the fact that parents willing to help out aren't springing up at anywhere near the same rate.

In some of the 14 districts within the Lower Island Juvenile Soccer Association there are too many boys who want to play soccer. Some have been told: "Sorry, there's no room for you on a team in this district."

What many parents may not realize when their sons come home with this news is that they can appeal to the association to have their boy play in a nearby district, if there is room for him there. But that doesn't really alleviate the problem.

Teams carry 18 players but if one group has, say, 25 players or more, then it could split up into two teams to give all the boys a game providing —and here's the catch—they can get enough parents to help out as coaches and managers.

Right now, says Lower Island Association president John Paynter, who took over this year from Peter Bishop, there just aren't enough new parents coming forward to take an active role in minor soccer here.

You sprint up and down the touchline at Bullen Park on a warm Sunday afternoon stepping occasionally on the fleeting shadow of Paynter and you think that perhaps he just got carried away.

Fresh from refereeing one juvenile game, he's now running the line for a second one and acting as manager for his Cadboro Bay Royal Trust team at the same time. And when it's all over, he'll drive a car-load of the boys to their various homes.

Devotion above and beyond the call of duty? No, says Paynter. It's needed. There just aren't enough referees, linesmen, coaches and managers to go around.

The sport, he says, is in jeopardy because of the attitude today of players to each other and to referees, and because of insufficient interest by parents.

"Too many players are getting physical and resentful today," Paynter points out. "Soccer isn't a game for primitives — it's a sport for gentlemen. We are trying to create a whole new attitude to make up for the last 10 retrograde years."

Officials really have their hands full of kids and soccer balls right now.

Wilf Sadler was involved in minor soccer here for 28 years before turning to the senior game and being appointed to the B.C. Soccer Commission. And he tells of when he and Don Wakelyn put forward the idea of a zone system just 10 years ago and there were less than 50 teams on the Lower Island. And of back when he started when there were less than a dozen teams.

In 1967 there were still less than 100 teams and in 1969 there were only 115.

Today, there are 170 teams in divisions one to seven for boys ranging in age from 17 to 10. And there are another 40 teams in the "kindergarten" divisions for eight, nine and 10-year-old boys. Altogether, well over 3,000 boys are playing soccer on the Lower Island and in the whole of B.C. that figure is over 25,000.

The officials want as many boys to play as possible.

"When any district has to turn boys away, it is tantamount to saying there aren't enough parents interested," Paynter said.

"Many parents feel they don't know enough about soccer and are loathe to come forward and offer their services," Paynter explained. "But they really don't require any previous experience in soccer, providing they are willing to help organize the boys' practices and make sure they have the right gear. Every team can't hope to have an expert.

"Take me, I'm the perfect example," the president said. "I'm a typical case of a parent becoming involved when my boy was of an age to play and I've stayed with it.

"We need parents who perhaps don't have any particular skills themselves . . . but who are interested in their boy learning soccer — interested enough to care."

The new fuel for the new cars.

If you're thinking of buying a new car, you may need a new kind of fuel. Esso 2000 Unleaded gasoline. Developed by Esso research to match the performance requirements of today's engines.

For all '75's with a catalytic converter, unleaded gas is a must. The car manufacturers will tell you that. Even if unleaded gas is not specified, Esso 2000, can still be beneficial to your new car. Here's why:

With regular use over an extended period of time Esso 2000 Unleaded can keep critical components of your engine cleaner, especially if used from the beginning of your car's life. Esso 2000 gasoline contains special detergent additives which help maintain carburetor cleanliness. These additives control deposits that may interfere with combustion efficiency.

Regular use of Esso 2000 Unleaded also means longer spark plug life. Mufflers last longer, too. Which means that if you start with Esso 2000 and stay with Esso 2000, lower maintenance costs can be expected over the life of your car.

In addition to those useful benefits, it's nice to know that Esso 2000 Unleaded gasoline can help maintain exhaust emission standards. Overall, the result is a more efficient, smoother-running engine.

What if you drive an older car? Check your owner's manual. Many '71 and later cars can use unleaded gas as well. For those cars Esso 2000 Unleaded can help extend spark plug and muffler life.

Meanwhile, if you're heading for the new car showrooms, Esso 2000 Unleaded is the name to remember. The new fuel for the new cars.

You'll find it at Esso retailers wherever you see this sign.

Lopsided Day In Soccer Play

Things were more than a little one-sided Wednesday in the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League.

In fact, a total of 26 goals were scored in four matches and only one of those goals came from a losing team.

That was in the game at Belmont where Ron George scored to prevent a shutout as Vic High Tyees romped to a 6-1 victory. John Spadafora and Ron McGovern, with two goals each, and Brian Ayres and Charlie Davis, with one goal each, were the Vic High scorers.

In the other three games, though, the losing squads didn't make it onto the scoreboard. League-leading Reynolds Roadrunners downed Claremont Spartans 6-0; Spectrum blanked Oak Bay Bays 5-0 and Mt. Douglas Rams swamped Parkland Panthers 8-0.

Drew Finnerty scored four times to lead the Roadrunners while Mike Hardy and Mike Dominique got the other goals.

Ed Murray, Stu Holroyd, Dennis Varcoe, Dan Hood and Doug Vincent were scorers for the Spectrum team, which has fired in a total of 42 goals in only nine games.

Bill Myles scored three times to lead the Mt. Doug onslaught. Randy Price and Jim Bissenden got two goals each and the other scorer was Joe Achadinha.

Next games: Friday — Claremont at Oak Bay; Vic High at Spectrum; Reynolds at Belmont; Esquimalt vs. Parkland, Royal Athletic Park.

PLAYING-COACH Jenny John (above) will lead B.C. in search of title when Canadian women's field hockey championships start at 9 a.m. Friday at University of Victoria. B.C. and Alberta tied in last year's final and shared title but Mrs. John says strong B.C. team can win it outright this time. Tourney runs four days with championship final set for 1:15 p.m. Sunday.

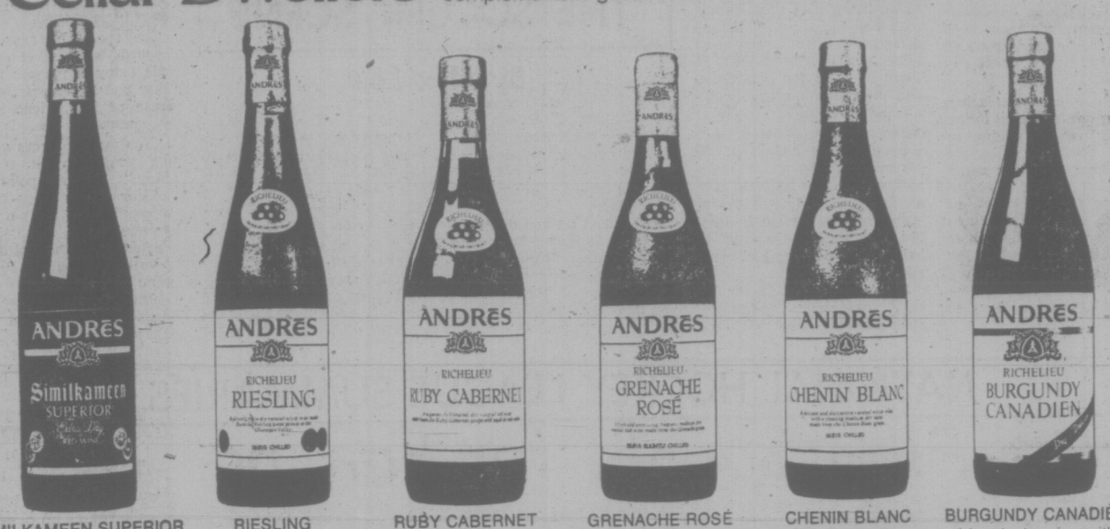
Andrés Cellar Dwellers

Andrés table wines are made in the finest European tradition. After the grapes are crushed they're aged the traditional way for quiet, careful vinification. Then they're bottled with natural cork, and further aged in Andrés cellars until they reach their point of finest maturity. Andrés table wines. Classic complements to good food.

ANDRÉS VINTNERS OF FINE WINES



SIMILKAMEEN SUPERIOR A unique, dry, red wine of distinctive ruby colour and fragrant bouquet. A complement to any meal.

RIESLING An extra dry varietal white wine made from the Riesling grape. Ideal served with fish, poultry and other delicate meats.

RUBY CABERNET A full-bodied, dry varietal red wine, aged in oak casks for a hearty bouquet and robust flavour. Well suited to full-flavoured dishes.

GRENACHE ROSÉ A fragrant medium dry varietal wine with the fresh bouquet of the Grenache grape and a crisp appetizing flavour.

CHENIN BLANC A delicate and distinctive varietal white wine. Its medium dry taste is perfect when served chilled with light meat dishes.

BURGUNDY CANADIEN A hearty dry wine, with full rich character and distinct flavour, best suited to robust dishes.

Glazier 4th Alderman Hopeful

GLAZIER
. . . solo bid

Victoria's quickening election tempo produced another candidate Wednesday — the fourth this week — in the person of consulting engineer Murray Glazier.

In making his announcement, Glazier stressed that his will be strictly a solo, unsupported attempt at a seat on city council in the Nov. 16 civic election.

"I have not sought or received the endorsement of any designated or organized group," he said. "I am not part of any slate or representative of any faction."

He said he will run on his personal experience and competence and seek voter support from all sections of the community. Housing and community development will be the main planks in his platform.

A member of the city's Advisory Planning Commission, Glazier served for three years on the board of directors of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation in Ottawa.

During that time, he says, the corporation's role changed from "being primarily that of a mortgage lender to that of an instrument of social housing," with new programs and policies for neighborhood improvement, assisted home ownership, encouragement of co-operative housing groups and the like.

Glazier believes the present council under Mayor Peter Pollen's leadership is "very much on the right track."

"I would not be interested in running if I was a malcontent but there's always room for improvement," he said.

Glazier was chairman of last year's United Way campaign and serves as a board member of both the Community Chest and the Boys Club of Greater Victoria. He lives at 2532 Orchard.

Earlier this week the Association of Concerned Electors, a new civic action group, endorsed three candidates for Victoria aldermanic seats: Kay Lines, Ann Tarasoff and John Warren.

Crash Plan Sought for Famine

OTTAWA (CP) — A series of crash programs is urgently needed to head off the growing threat of widespread famine in food-poor countries, the Canadian conference on the world food crisis concluded Wednesday.

Delegates to the two-day meeting called on the federal government to take bold steps to substantially increase food production for underdeveloped countires—but without jeopardizing the new prosperity of Canadian farmers.

They bluntly told well-fed Canadians to change their eating habits to free more high-protein foods for the world's estimated 460 million hungry people.

They also delivered a sharp rebuke to international agribusinesses, accusing multi-national corporations of exploiting starvation for profit and asked for a broad range of programs on food research, stockpiling, emergency relief and conservation.

The 240 delegates produced about 25 guides for the Canadian delegation to the World Food Conference, sponsored by the United Nations, in Rome Nov. 5-16.

Sponsored by the Canadian Council for International Cooperation, the Canadian Hunger Foundation and the United Nations Association, the meeting brought together representatives of agriculture, industry, labor and several non-government social and relief agencies.

They heard accounts of problems in Africa, Asia and Latin America where population growth is outpacing increases in the food supply and were told that major breakthroughs in increasing food production must be made within 10 years if widespread famine covering entire continents is to be averted.

The resulting resolutions combined proposals for increasing Canadian food production, especially of wheat, with measures to make developing countries more self-sufficient in food.

Aid Plan Stresses Food, Agriculture

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada is developing a five-year basic aid strategy which will place more concentration on food and agriculture, it was announced Wednesday.

Paul Gerin-Lajoie, president of the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA), said at a news conference he hopes the new strategy will be in operation early in 1975.

He also announced a $230-million five-year aid program to the drought-hit Sahel region south of the Sahara.

Among points raised by Gerin-Lajoie were:

—Canada makes more from developing countries through increases in its commodity prices than it gives in increased aid.

—Total Canadian aid next year should reach .53 per cent of the gross national product (GNP), compared with .48 per cent at present and the United Nations target for developed countries of .7 per cent. Canada should reach the UN target in 1980.

—Emergence of dollar-rich but socially and economically poor oil and commodity producers in the Third World has resulted in the creation of the "Fourth World." These are the countries such as India which do not have the resources or potential resources to assist them.

Documents Held Back, Indians Claim

The department of Indian affairs is withholding documents needed by Indians to research land claims, Philip Paul said Wednesday after a meeting of Indian researchers from across the country.

Paul said the federal government is funding researchers across the country, "but there are problems arising — the government cut off land area maps and exhibits necessary for our claims."

Paul, land claims director of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, made the announcement at a press conference Wednesday.

He wants to "encourage the taxpayers to help the Indian movement and also to encourage politicians. They should be making claims to the federal government because they're responsible for the Indian people."

Purpose of the two-day meeting at the Indian Land Claims headquarters on McKenzie, he said, was to look at problem areas affecting (Indian) researchers on land claims across Canada.

"The federal government is making it difficult to prepare our case for settlement. They say they're prepared to negotiate, but make it difficult."

Government documentation, he said, is the main factor in research because "the Indian people passed on information (about claims) through word of mouth, they kept scanty documents."

Indians across the country are looking "at other methods" he said, to develop a strong community front to pursue land claims, which he said, are "fundamental to the future of Indian people in Canada."

Although problems are arising, and funding for researchers to investigate the claims runs out in 1976, he said "we know this can't be licked overnight."

A committee of researchers has been formed to request the National Indian Brotherhood tell the federal government of their problems.

A royal commission from 1916 to 1924 had recommended additions and deletions of Indian land and, "what they did was take high quality land away from the Indians in exchange for poor quality land," Paul claimed.

Maps used by the commission — about 260, along with 5,000 exhibits are "not available when we ask for them."

GOLDSTREAM FIRE MOP-UP

B.C. Forest Service firemen are "mopping up" a one-acre fire which broke out Wednesday on Humpback Road, south of Goldstream.

Forest ranger Marshall Antonelli said today's rain is assisting 10 firemen at the scene.

Meanwhile, smoke spotted Wednesday at the scene of the September fire on Mount Finlayson has subsided.

Hospital Board Clears Hurdle

The first of two formal steps to establish a new hospital and health planning commission was taken by the Capital regional hospital board Wednesday.

The board agreed on changes in its charter, which if approved by Health Minister Dennis Cocke and the provincial cabinet, will expand its powers to include control all regional hospital development, including extending, relocating or discontinuing any hospital service.

At the same time, the board received for study a draft bylaw covering establishment of the planning commission.

The draft bylaw provides for the commission having 12 voting members, appointed by the board, and including four regional directors, five members of hospital boards in the region and three residents from the district.

The new powers sought by the regional hospital board would be transferred to the commission, making it the agency in charge of hospital development.

The regional hospital board hopes its charter changes can be approved by the province in time for the board to pass the bylaw at its next meeting in two weeks.

A freight car is useless if it isn't going somewhere.

And to get it going, it takes people.

Al typifies the new thinking at CP Rail.

Thinking that has given us an almost 40% improvement in on-time performance on certain key trains.

We improved this service through better planning and utilization of equipment.

We added 1,860 new pieces of rolling stock last year, and re-designed and modified another 4,900.

Then we bought 40 new freight locomotives at approximately $450,000 each.

And spent $11,300,000 on ties.

This kind of commitment is part of the spirit at CP Rail.

We believe good freight service is really a question of good people.

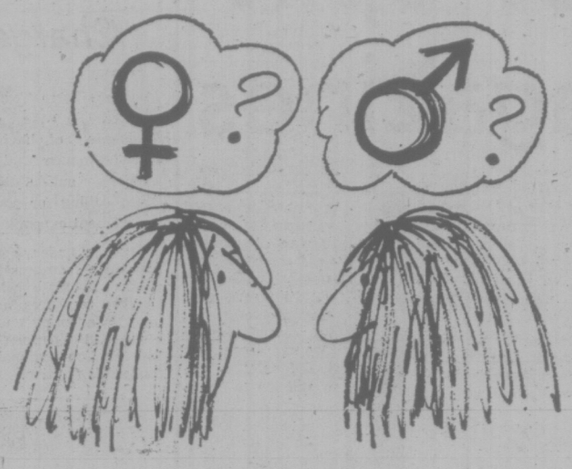
STORES



In this uncertain world....

it's nice to know
we guarantee everything.

Car care is one place you don't want any uncertainties. We know how you feel. That's why we guarantee everything. With written guarantees on tires, brake service, alignment and batteries. And with our Customer Satisfaction Guarantee on everything else.

In either case, you can be sure of one thing. We will bend over backwards to make sure you feel good about coming to Firestone Stores. The best way to do that is to earn your confidence. And that's really why we guarantee everything.

Our written guarantees mean just what they say. If our products don't measure up, we'll replace them. If our service work isn't right, we'll do it again. You'll agree that no fair-minded person could ask for anything more.

Here's how our 40,000 mile alignment guarantee works. Bring your car in for our special $19.95 alignment. (That surprisingly low price is for any North American car!). We'll give you an Alignment Service Agreement good for 40,000 miles or four years. With that guarantee, you can have your alignment checked at any Firestone Store every 5,000 miles — or whenever you think necessary. If your car needs an alignment, it gets an alignment. With no extra charge for the life of the guarantee. There's no red tape or loopholes. Even if you hit a curb three minutes after an alignment, you can bring your car right back in and we'll do another alignment free.

Our written guarantees are one reason why Firestone looks after more brakes than anyone else in Canada. The guarantees run from 20,000 to 40,000 miles, depending on how much you want us to do.

With this 30,000 mile drum brake overhaul, we install new linings, repack front outer wheel bearings, arc linings to drums, resurface drums plus brake system.

By the way, we return worn parts in a plastic bag. So you can see for yourself how much they needed replacing. And, of course, we never do any additional work without your approval.

As you'd expect, the number one drum brake people are first for disc brakes too. There's a lot of care and skill behind this 30,000 mile guarantee. It covers installation of new front disc pads, repacking front outer wheel bearings, resurfacing front rotors, plus inspection of entire brake system.

In this uncertain world, there is nothing more annoying than a dead battery. There are so many starts built into the Lifetime Supreme that we guarantee starting for as long as you keep your car. Literally. If your battery lets you down a year from now . . . five years from now . . . or even ten years from now . . . bring it back. And we'll replace it. Free.

Cabinet Split On Magazines

TORONTO (CP) — The issue of whether to end the special tax status of Time Canada and Reader's Digest has produced the first major conflict in Prime Minister Trudeau's new cabinet, according to the Globe and Mail.

In an Ottawa dispatch, the newspaper says the conflict has divided the ministers along the lines of their feelings toward the sensitive issue of foreign ownership and economic nationalism and by their differing attitudes toward interfering with competition and free enterprise.

The cabinet also is divided in their willingness to put an end to Time's special tax status the likely result being that the magazine would end its Canadian section—without assurance the move would give birth to a home-grown news magazine, says the paper.

It says nationalists such as Energy Minister Donald Macdonald, Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie and newer members such as Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan and Urban Affairs Minister Barnett Danson are likely to back state Secretary Hugh Faulkner's move to end the special status.

More cautions members like C. M. Drury, minister of public works, and Privy Council President Mitchell Sharp argue that a strong Canadian magazine will not be helped by killing off the competition, the newspaper adds.

Drury, whose Montreal Westmount riding contains the Reader's Digest operation, said in an interview that "we've had a pretty satisfactory evolution through competition . . .

"We could have more to lose than to gain by getting rid of the Canadian editions."

The Globe and Mail says one western minister is concerned that the whole fuss "might just be an exercise to help Peter Newman editor of Maclean's."

The newspaper added that a survey of cabinet opinion suggests that Time's special edition will eventually be killed, but the Reader's Digest operation will survive.

It says the mechanism would be to change the Income Tax Act to require 50-per-cent Canadian ownership for tax treatment as a Canadian magazine.

Trudeau Puffery Charged

OTTAWA (FP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau was accused in the commons Wednesday of having "shot down" Finance Minister John Turner's anti-inflation program calling for restraint in government expenditures.

Trudeau under attack from opposition members for being unable to state what anti-inflation measures his government is adopting and for engaging in "puffery" during the election campaign, defended his position.

PM Stalls on Home Grants

WOOLLIAMS
. . . angry

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau refused Wednesday to indicate when the government will begin making the $500 grants promised during the election campaign to first-timme buye of moderately-rpriced homes.

Questioned in the Commons, Trudeau would say only that the program will be implemented sometime during the expected four-year life of the new Parliament.

The Sept. 30 throne speech, outlining government legislative plans, indicated that action would be taken on the program during the first session of the new Parliament.

Trudeau's reply Wednesday brought immediate criticism from Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North), the main Conservative housing critic.

He said the prime minister has a responsibility to make clear whether the program, announced in June, was mere election puffery or was announced sincerely by the government.

Trudeau repeated that all housing promises, including the grants plan, will be adopted during the full term of Parliament.

The plan would make $500 grants available to first-time buyers of homes falling within specified price ranges in various cities.

TORY BID FAILS

OTTAWA (CP) — The government easily defeated Wednesday a Progressive Conservative amendment to a motion accepting the throne speech.

The amendment, which condemned the government for alleged inaction in economic matters, was defeated 122 to 103. The New Democratic Party and Social Credit members voted with the Progressive Conservatives, as did Leonard Jones (Ind-Moncton) a former Tory.

The amendment said the government has failed "to act resolutely after the election of July 8th, last, has contributed to the increasing disparity and the social and economic disarray in the country, which require prompt, decisive leadership which is lacking in the speech from the throne."

Wheat Line Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The price of the basic ingredient in bread, wheat, would be stable in Canada until the middle of 1980 under terms of a bill introduced in the Commons Wednesday by Otto Lang, minister responsible for the wheat board.

The bill is the proposed Two-Price Wheat Act, under which the government would subsidize the price of wheat used to make bread until Aug. 31, 1980. Millers would not have to pay more than $3.25 a bushel regardless of how high the international price climbs. This now is about $6 a bushel for the type of wheat used for bread in Canada, No. 1 western red.

The subsidy has been in effect for about a year and the bill, which would extend it for six years, would fulfil a commitment by the government last year.

A similar bill was introduced last year but died with the last Parliament.

Indians Claim Win

OTTAWA (CP) — George Manuel, president of the National Indian Brotherhood, gave credit Wednesday to the Native People's Caravan "for breaking through the gatekeeper's role played by the civil service and giving us directo access to the cabinet."

"It looks like we made a breakthrough and I think we can credit to a large degree the grassroots people saying 'enough, enough,'" Manuel told reporters after the brotherhood executive met for more than 90 minutes with a special cabinet committee headed by Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan.

From that meeting came an agreement that the brotherhood, voice of Canada's 300,000 registered Indians, must have frequent access to cabinet to talk over problems rather than bring them to the public service.

Manuel said the frustration of Indian communities in not getting their message across to the public service led to the violent demonstration of the Native People's Caravan on Parliament Hill Sept. 30.

The brotherhood president said the cabinet committee was told that the elected Indian leaders feel the same frustration and responded to it by agreeing to frequent and regular meetings with the brotherhood executive.

"It's too bad that this kind of situation has to happen before cabinet responds," Manuel said referring to the violence on Parliament Hill.

Both Buchanan and Manuel said there was no discussion of earlier Indian demands for an independent investigation of the demonstration.

However Manuel told reporters he was concerned about the response of the RCMP and that the mounties riot squad was used for the first time during that demonstration.

He said the brotherhood, now holding a special three-day executive meeting, is considering holding its own investigation into the demonstration.

This would include calling witnesses at sessions open to the public, said Manuel.

What Weighty Problems Senators Face

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—To freeload, or not to freeload: That was the question.

Whether it was nobler to find out if they were invited, or to simply crash a party, was the issue to which Honorable Senators yesterday devoted their sober second thoughts.

The Senate Hansard for October 9 records how the Upper House, with incisiveness and despatch, settled the weighty problem of a press gallery reception.

Herewith, the transcript from the hallowed Red Chamber:

Senator van Roggen: "Honorable Senators, the question period may not be quite the right moment at which to raise this matter, but I would like to raise it in the form of a question to the Leader of the Government, as to whether or not he wishes to make a statement concerning the reception to be held this afternoon by members of the National Press Gallery for all Members of Parliament in the Railway Committee Room, between six o'clock and eight o'clock.

"It came to my attention only through attending our national caucus this morning, as I have no notice on my desk to this effect, and I thought, in case other Senators had also not received an invitation, that it should be known to all members of this chamber that they are invited by the National Press to the reception at six o'clock.

Senator Ray Perrault: "Honorable Senators, all of us are, of course, aware of the fact that members of Parliament serve either in this chamber or the other chamber; but all of us are members of Parliament.

"If a general invitation has in fact been issued to members of Parliament to attend a reception of this type, I would think it involves every member of this chamber."

Senator Croll: "They presented it to caucus.

Senator Grossart: "I wonder if I could ask the leader of the Government as to whether he thinks that if we are not invited we should go."

Senator Perrault: "I think that it is a decision which must be made by the individuals member of this assembly."

Senator Grossart: "I wonder if I could suggest to the leader of the Government, to clear this up, because it could be embarrassing, that he should, through the usual channels, find out if we are invited and notify us later.

Senator Perrault: "As a firm believer in private initiative, it seems to me that those honorable Senators who are interested in attending should make inquiries on their own behalf.

Senator Croll: "Honorable Senators, you see what happens. The Honorable Senator gets up and he says that all members of Parliament are invited 'including Senators'. This is exactly what we object to. We are all Members of Parliament.

"Let me say also that I cannot understand Senator Grossart. Any time we get a chance to freeload on them we should take it. They have freeloaded on us often enough before, so let us go there."

Senator Walker: "But aren't they selling tickets for the drinks?"

The Son Never Sets . . .

OTTAWA (CP) — A contest to determine who was the most faithful son of the British Empire yesterday ended in a draw between Prime Minister Trudeau and John Diefenbaker.

Diefenbaker first asked the Prime Minister if there was any truth to a report that Senator Paul Martin would be named Canada's representative to Britain with the title of Ambassador instead of the traditional one of High Commissioner.

Trudeau denied the report, adding that as "a member in good standing of the Royal Society of Canada" such a change would certainly not emanate from him.

Rubbing salt in Diefenbaker's wound at never having been made a full member of the society, Trudeau mentioned that the former prime minister was only an ex-officio member whereas he, Trudeau, was "a member in my own right."

Why, then, asked Diefenbaker, did the Trudeau government take away the Royal in Royal Mail?

That was begun under Diefenbaker's administration, Trudeau replied, to the general laughter of the Commons.

No one could be found to confirm or deny either statement.

Electors Group Concerned—But Not With the NDP

Spokesmen for both the New Democratic Party and the newly-formed Victoria civic group, the Association of Concerned Electors, said Wednesday, the association has no official link with the NDP and does not herald the start of party involvement in local civic politics.

Joan Johnston, spokesman for the group, stressed that it is broadly based and non-political, and the fact that certain persons known to be NDP supporters attended the two recent meetings was "quite accidental."

"We were there just as people," she said.

Johnston said the impetus to form the group started with some people lunching together one day, airing their individual concerns about City Hall policies and saying "Gee, why don't we do something about it."

Like-minded citizens were called together in an "ad hoc manner," a loosely-structured group formed under her chairmanship, and the sequel earlier this week was the group's nomination of a slate of three candidates for the Nov. 16 election.

A former Burnaby school trustee who is now treasurer of the James Bay Community Association, Johnston said many of those who attended the two meetings "have arms in various parts of the community," but they are a diverse group to which no particular political label can be attached.

The association aims to have representation "from the entire area, all the citizens of Victoria," she added.

Kay Lines, one of the endorsed candidates who is also active in the James Bay Community Association, termed the association "a very hodgepodge group," representing a broad cross-section of the community and residents of various political persuasions.

"I really hope they are representative of all Victoria," she said.

Among those who attended Tuesday night's meeting were Roland Morgan, research assistant to the NDP caucus, Wayne Harding, administrative assistant to Highways Minister Graham Lea and Dan Miller, Lea's, executive assistant.

Harding told a Times reporter he attended "as a citizen only," and said emphatically there is no official NDP connection with the association.

If one or two prominent Conservatives had been present would some people have drawn the conclusion that ACE was a "front for the Conservative party," he speculated.

Bill Fawcett, representative of the Victoria constituency on the NDP Provincial Council, said under party policy it is "quite possible" that some day Victoria could see a slate of NDP candidates for a municipal election.

But to date no such decision had been made, he said. "We have been thinking about the possibility but we don't think we are prepared to go ahead at the present time.

"A lot of work goes into getting prepared for such a thing, for instance drawing up the party's municipal policy for Victoria, and it also takes a fair amount of financing."

Fawcett said meanwhile some party members in Victoria "who feel we should be in that area" have attended the ACE meetings, but only in an individual capacity. It is party policy to encourage all members to take an active role in municipal politics, he said.

At his news conference earlier this week, Mayor Peter Pollen appeared to be referring to the association when he said:

"I look with a little apprehension at some of the narrow viewpoints of some people who are coming forward. It is dangerous if people are mainly for one cause."

Pollen said it would be "tragic" if partisan politics were introduced into Victoria, particularly as the present council had been so "progressive" in its policies.

How 'The Bug' Began: Could It Happen Here?

The idea of an all-Canadian "people's car" which surfaces occasionally — most recently from a disgruntled branch of the automakers' union in Oshawa — is logical, practical and, of course, completely, utterly unlikely.

Most of our deflated cash for wheels now goes to people who were at our throats less than a generation ago or, with few exceptions, American products with such a built-in obsolesence in quality and style that they are, as one of Ralph Nader's men put it recently, "rolling disasters."

We have the habit of electing free enterprise governments and will, I suppose, far into the future and so the theory is inviolate that what's good for General Motors is good for Canada. Yet a surprisingly strong case may be made for making our own sturdy, small pollution-free car, completely stripped of costly chrome, for sale at home and abroad.

For one thing, most of this country presents driving problems that requires a car of specific design at low cost. Moreover there's a constant cry for a greater use of our raw resources and for increased employment, national problems which might be solved to an astonishing degree by manufacturing an automobile that would fit our needs.

What's more we have the know-how. Our war-time production of tanks and airplanes was pretty convincing proof that we can build machines as well as any people in the world. Indeed, we did so well in the war years and kept so many people in jobs and so many boys in nice, new tanks and airplanes that now, in retrospect, it seems a shame that the peace got in the way of making us an industrial nation.

The argument that we are too small a country to have our own automobile doesn't hold water, either. Both Sweden and Czechoslovakia make distinctive cars that earn considerable export earnings while our own dollars leave for Detroit, Tokyo or West Germany.

Matter of fact, the whole blueprint for such a plan may be found in almost any German archives since the forerunner of the modern-day Volkswagen, which did more than any other product to make West Germany an industiral giant again, was truly a "people car" in every sense of the word.

That, of course, was a pre-war dream, but most of us who served for any length of time in Germany during and after the Second World Thing were exposed to it and, in my own case, led me to wonder if it would work here.

In those pre-war years everybody in Germany called the Volkswagen the "KdF", which comes from the name Kraft dursch Freude of "Strength Through Joy." The idea was that a mass-produced, one-type, four-passenger car of simple design could be turned out cheaply by the state, mainly to give the people an additional means of recreation (so they could all get big and strong and conquer the world).

The idea started in 1934 when the German motor car companies were asked to whip up a design and get the thing going. They were understandably gloomy about creating their own competition and stalled so long that the job was finally put in the hands of the German Labor Front.

Actually the buyers underwrote the project. Even before the plant was put up there were 250,000 subscribers kicking in two dollars a week and hopefully looking forward to the day when their horseless carriage would be delivered. The total factory price was listed at 990 Reichmarks or just about $400.

Quite a few test models were built and some were still going around when I was in those parts, but the proposed factory at Fallersleben, near Hanover, never got into full production.

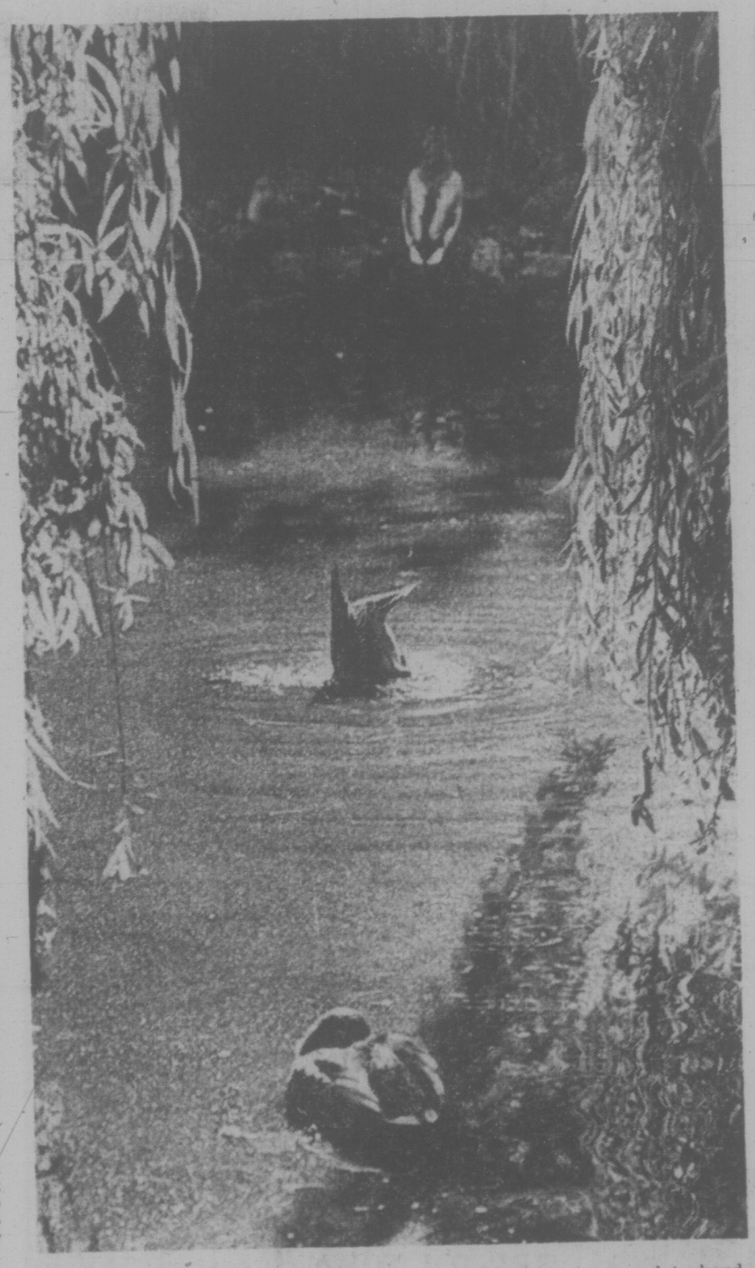
The car, itself, at those prices was a lulu, as we used to say, and incorporated many of the features that have since made the Volkswagen a big seller throughout the world. It looked more like a Fiat, at that time, but the engine was a 24-horsepower, air-cooled job placed in the rear and the first models gave up to 40 miles to a gallon with a top speed of 65 miles an hour.

There were some radical departures that appalled the traditional manufacturers, but turned out to be eminently sensible. The frame, for example, was tubular and carried heat from the engine, just as the Volkswagen does today.

Just for laughs I talked to three Victoria dealers yesterday and found them, as you might expect, rather cool to the idea. They do not think, for one thing, that an all-Canadian car, produced from scratch, could complete in price with the Japanese-made cars without a massive world market that might take years to create.

They're inclined to think, too, that Canadians are hooked on the selling technique of a new model each and every year and inclined to think of the automobile as a badge of social distinction and not merely as cheap, reliable transportation.

I'd have pointed out that that was precisely the objection of the KdF in its formative years, but then, again, maybe they're right.



WHAT IS IT that ducks find so intriguing, down there among the weeds on the bottom of the pond? Food, that's what. When it's a rainy day at Beacon Hill Park and there aren't many people around to hand out bread, it doesn't much matter whether a duck goes mooching above or below the surface. (John McKay photo)

Dispose-to-Rule Saanich Mayor Asks Residents

Saanich residents today were asked by Mayor Ed Lum to strictly follow garbage collection regulations to ease the emergency caused by work-to-rule procedures being carried out by 300 municipal employees.

He said he had received hundreds of calls from residents, complaining that their garbage had not been picked up.

"Supervisory personnel are doing their best to pick up garbage not being collected by the regular crew," Lum said. "There's not much more we can do except ask people to co-operate by not filling their garbage cans so full."

Members of Local 374, Canadian Union of Public Employees, held a meeting Wednesday night and decided to continue work-to-rule.

President Jim Brett said today there had been a motion to rescind the work-to-rule decision made at an earlier special meeting but, by a large vote — about two-thirds of those present — it was agreed to carry on working to rule.

Brett said the decision was originally prompted by the "lack of consideration on the part of the council on our request for an interim increase (of $100 a month to offset cost-of-living increases)."

He said lack of consideration "in other areas" had made Wednesday night's large turnout determined to continue the strategy.

Brett said the next move is up to council and suggested a meeting be called between council and a representative from the local.

He said refuse collectors had been made to appear as "the bad guys" but the municipality is actually at fault because the garbage pickup bylaw had not been enforced until now.

Brett said he understood managerial staff is initiating "an advertising campaign" to make residents aware of the bylaw regulations.

These, Brett said, included size, kind and number of containers.

Region Plugs Power Program Into Highlands

The Capital Region Board Wednesday gave its approval to B.C. Hydro plans to build a $5 million, 500 kilovolt power line through the Highlands and Malahat districts.

Of the three possible routes for the line, the regional board endorsed the one that would leave intact an area of the Highlands slated for heavy residential development under the regional plan.

If given final approval by B.C. Hydro, the line will run from the Pike Lake substation, west across the Highlands crossing near the intersection of Munns and Millstream Lake Roads, across Finlayson Arm at Christmas Point, about a mile north of the present crossing, and continue to a point south of Shawnigan Lake. The line will be hooked up with 500 kv lines to be brought down the Island from Qualicum.

The existing 138 kv power line which runs through the southern portion of the Highlands, will be taken out by about 1990, E. S. Collins of Hydro's land division told regional directors Wednesday.

He said it was possible that a new kind of steel pole could be used in areas where the line would be exposed to public view, instead of the "more-unsightly" lattice-work type poles.

Hydro held two public meetings on the power lines late in 1973 and early this year where some residents from the Highlands and Malahat expressed opposition to the plan.

The planned line passes mainly through undeveloped area in the Highlands, but at least two properties near the Millstream Lake-Munns Road intersection could be affected.

Kerry Joy, the owner of one of the properties, said today he is not sure how close the line will come to his house as Hydro has not yet released detailed plans of the route.

"I'll have to make a decision on whether to sell or to offer the property to Hydro after I find out how close it will be," Joy said.

He said approval of the route was a "hard piece of news for all Highlands residents."

"Any new route through a wild area such as the Highlands is a destruction of the natural area and it's a shame."

Ultimatum by Janitors: Settlement by Oct. 25

The long-standing rating dispute between school custodians and Greater Victoria school board must be settled by Oct. 25 or it will become a "dead issue," a union spokesman warned today.

Bob Cunningham, first-vice-president of local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said the decision to call an ultimatum was made by union executive at a meeting Wednesday.

If the matter isn't settled by the 25th, he said, the union will refuse to discuss the servicing of school rentals and night school functions by custodians in negotiations for its 1975 contract.

CUPE claims its custodians aren't being adequately paid for work involved in opening the schools for evening functions.

It says the present contract states that each school be rated to determine how much custodial work was involved at each school, including extra work created by evening functions.

Cunningham said that rating was never done in the year-and-a-half since the contract was signed, and what is now being done by the school board is "sort of a pretext of rating."

A board spokesman said today the board is now engaged in rating the schools, and has promised CUPE it will be completed by Oct. 31.

The custodians have refused to assist in the rating, he said.

The rating dispute led custodians last month to begin protesting by refusing to service or open the doors to night school classes.

The school board has countered by filing a complaint with the Labor Relations Board asking the labor board to end this limiting of service.

Today for the third day an unusual number of maintenance workers, 37, have booked off sick. Wednesday 26 custodians were off sick.

21 Days to Decide on Future

Thirty-five property owners in Esquimalt will spend the next three weeks wrestling with a co-operative decision on the future development of a 23-acre parcel of land at the northwest end of the municipality.

Ald. Terry Prentice said today the owners of property between the E and N Railroad tracks and Admirals Road have been asked by council to submit by letter within three weeks "their hopes for their neighborhood."

He said the residents attended a meeting at municipal hall Wednesday and the majority wanted to maintain the present character of the neighborhood, mainly single family homes on large lots, but zoned for duplex development.

"But development is inevitable."

Council has received one proposal for townhouse development on two of the lots on Admirals and another development proposal is in the offing, he said.

Prentice predicted there's "only a slim chance the residents will agree what should be done, but council will try to filter out of their reactions some common wish and make a decision based on that."

Camosun Contract Struck

The faculty association of Camosun College has negotiated a first collective agreement with the college.

The agreement must now be ratified by the association and by the college council.

Neither Norman Preston, faculty negotiator, nor Dr. John Duffus, college negotiator, expect problems getting ratification.

Preston said the first contract basically contains many conditions that the college had previously granted to faculty before the faculty association was certified as a bargaining agent.

The agreement calls for binding arbitration to settle labor disputes.

This first contract expires next March 31 so negotiations on the second agreement will begin next month, said Duffus.

Main question left up in the air is just whom the faculty association is bargaining for.

UVic-Notre Dame Link Surprise Proposal Aim

University of Victoria officials will "await with interest" provincial government plans which may include making the small campus of Notre Dame University in Nelson an extension of UVic.

UVic acting-president S. A. Jennings said today a statement by Premier Barrett that the government would think about linking the two campuses "was entirely new."

"We'll await with interest to see exactly what the premier has in mind," said Jennings.

Barrett promised Wednesday in Nelson to give "pensive thought" to a proposal from the Nelson city council to make NDU an extension of UVic or University of B.C.

The premier assured the local council that the government would not close the facility, which has an enrolment of some 600 and is threatened with closure because of funding difficulties and labor problems.

JENNINGS
. . . waiting with interest

The provincial government had announced in June it would take over the university and that same month Education Minister Eileen Dailly was reported as saying the government would decide on NDU's future by January, 1975.

Said Barrett Wednesday: "We just haven't made up our minds as yet to what the future education role of Notre Dame should be. It will play a continuing role in some form and we shall have a decision for you before the end of the year.

Making the university an extension of one of the province's larger campuses, he said, "is cause for pensive thought, pensive thought."

Women's Bureau Gets Token Touch

elizabeth forbes

In these days, when the provincial government's Women's Bureau receives only a page-and-a-half of type in the Department of Labor's annual report (and that merely to record routine procedures during the year), it is interesting to read a report telling you that in the last decade women's bureaus have been established and are extremely active in many countries around the world.

This report was written by Dr. Madelene Jaccard, chairman of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women's employment conditions standing committee and printed in Widening Horizons, that organization's quarterly magazine.

It shows that while administrative arrangements vary from country to country, bureaus "establish a focal point to draw attention to the constant and changing opportunities, needs and problems of women workers."

They are also geared "to promote the evolution of coordinated policies and activities on employment and conditions of women's work."

Dr. Jaccard then reminds us that all bureaus — no matter where they are situated — "have to play an evolutional rather than a static role and to be responsive to new needs and problems."

She then goes on to explain how various countries have set up their bureaus and how they function.

In the United States, for instance, a women's bureau was opened as far back as 1920, to seek improvement in the status of women workers and to encourage comprehension of their needs and problems.

Today, much of its work is concerned with the elimination of sex discrimination in education, training, employment and treatment.

Many countries of Latin America now have women's bureaus, the largest and most active being in Argentina.

There the present tendency is "to widen their scope to make them more positive on women's employment as distinct from the enforcement of legislation on women and minors and to distinguish better between the needs and problems of women and minors."

In Asia, certain countries have women's bureaus or other organizations for handling women workers' problems. The oldest was established in Japan in 1947, within the labor ministry.

Since 1960 the Phillipines has had a women's and minors bureau within the labor department.

Indonesia set up a women's and children's service in the ministry of manpower in 1969, primarily concerned with protection of women workers and standards of employment. Sri Lanka has a special women's unit in the ministry of labor to examine working conditions.

Australia's women's bureau was set up in 1965 in the department of labor and national service, to study trends in employment, disseminate information and to encourage a wider understanding of the contribution made by women to economic life.

Even in the USSR there is a special committee on women workers that is an advisory body to the all-union central council. The same general pattern prevails in the Eastern European countries.

In western Europe, while the name "Women's Bureau" has often been by-passed, responsibility for dealing with women workers' problems is handled through special policy sections, co-ordinating units o women, special committies of women, sepcial committees on women workers, national councils and advisory committees, all working in much the same way and with the same aims and objectives (if not the same name).

A few countries — among them the United Kingdom — work on the principle that women's questions are best dealt with by the departments concerned with the substance "and that there's no advantage in bringing them together into a central women's bureau." These, I'm happy to say, are in the minority.

In Canada, a women's bureau was set up in the federal department of labor in 1954 to bring about wider understanding of the role and contribution of women in the work force.

This bureau is now a part of the employment standards program of labor.

It's main functions are to research all problems relating to women (especially to their employment) and through public relations and education to encourage women to participate actively in economic and social life.

It aims at educating employers and the public to the need to utilize fully the potential of women. And it disseminates information about employment and conditionss and supports programs for equal pay and opportunities.

Coming back to our own province and looking at that one-and-a-half page in the current report of the Department of Labor.

The first two paragraphs are reasonably clear. First that there were 325,000 women working, in British Columbia in 1973 (no breakdown here, however) and, at the same time, 22,000 women were looking for work.

Also that 31,456 inquiries were received from employees and employers and that 2,303 interviews were conducted.

Here again there is no breakdown. Nothing to tell us what steps were taken, what points scored (if any) and how many women were actually helped.

The rest is a mumbo-jumbo of words, with little or no meat.

Surely, if our Women's Bureau is to fulfill its proper role — as all those other bureaus are doing around the world — there is need for some sort of change.

For, as Dr. Jaccard has said — women's bureaus today must play an evolutional, rather than a static, role and they must be alert and responsive to all new needs and problems.

TORONTO, October 10th — I'm not exaggerating when I tell you that BLISTEX, the medicated lip ointment, helps heal severely chapped lips, cold sores and fever blisters. You know, many people do suffer from troubled lips — especially during the changing temperatures and blustery winds of Fall and Winter. Medicated Blistex helps maintain moisture balance and when used at the first sign of tenderness, often helps prevent chapped or cracked lips from developing. And here's a beauty tip . . . smooth on Blistex, blot with tissue, then apply lipstick to help protect against sore lips. Blistex comes in a handy purse size or larger tube for family use.

October 23 is United Nations Day, an appropriate time to brush up on your knowledge about the immense contribution this 135-member organization makes to the improvement of living conditions around the world.

The 20-page information-packed Reference Paper "Canada's Financial Contribution to the United Nations Family Organizations" stresses that Canada has always staunchly supported this world organization and actively participated in its programs.

Canada contributed to the U.N. on three levels: financial, peace-keeping and assistance to a variety of economic, social and humanitarian programs.

You will learn from the paper that the actual assessment of each member state is based on its net national product. Canada's assessment of 3.08 per cent is the eighth largest and in 1972 amounted to $5.49 million. Since its inception in 1945, Canada's assessed contributions have amounted to $421 million.

Much of the U.N. work to improve the living conditions of peoples around the world is carried out by specialized agencies which are linked to the United Nations. The largest of these is the World Health Organization.

The International Civil Aviation Organization is the only specialized United Nations organization which has its headquarters in Canada, namely in Montreal.

Chauvinist Pig?

DEAR ABBY: While I was driving my car, a traffic officer suddenly appeared, and signaled for me to pull over. I promptly obeyed and asked him what I had done wrong.

He asked me to get out of the car, and when I did, he looked me over—but good. Then he asked me for my driver's licence, which I gave him. Meanwhile, I was trembling like a leaf.

I noticed that he made a note of my name and address. Then he said: "You were exceeding the 35-mile-per-hour speed limit — but if you let me see you when I'm off duty, I'll call this a 'warning'." Then he smiled and told me his first name.

Abby, I was NOT going over the speed limit, and I was angry because he tricked me into stopping. Besides, I have a boyfriend and I'm not interested in seeing anyone else, but I didn't want a ticket so I said, "Okay."

Now, what if he calls me? — Blondie.

DEAR BLONDIE: Tell him if he wants to charge you with "resisting an officer" to go ahead, because he's not all that irresistible.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, you had something in your column about people who have a misdemeanor on their record and how to get it removed.

At age 18, I was wrongly accused of being an accomplice to a minor shoplifting offense. (Ten dollars.) Being very much upset by the whole thing, I didn't fight the charge. I just went to court, paid the fine and it was put on my record.

I am now 21, married and want to apply for employment, but the previous job (where the shoplifting incident took place) was the only one I've ever had, so I wonder if you can help me.

I don't think a person should be penalized the rest of his life for one minor mistake at an early age.

If it's possible to get this off my record, how do I go about it? — Bewildered.

DEAR BE: If you have been in no legal difficulty for a year following the incident, go to the Probation Department and inquire about the possibility of "sealing" your records.

Once they are sealed, it is as though they never existed and you may apply for a job without mentioning the fact that at one time you had this on your record. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: Was I ever glad to see that letter in your column from "Foolish Question," whose mother kept insisting that she felt pain in her leg — which had been amputated.

It was not a foolish question, and I am glad you didn't tell her she was "nutty" as so many call me when I tell them that my toes itch when, indeed, I have no toes.

I had my leg amputated below the knee, and one day when I was all alone sitting on my bed, the stump started jumping up and down on the bed. I couldn't even hold it still with my hands!

By the time the doctor arrived, it had stopped jumping, but he explained that nature, which is a wonderful thing, was "rebelling." There should be more nerves in my leg than I had, and nature was letting me know it.

You did a lot of amputees a big favor by printing that letter. Now, when we tell people that some part of our anatomy that isn't there is itching or throbbing or giving us pain, they won't look at us like we're loony. — Another Amputee.

DEAR ABBY: Can you tell me in what state I can marry my former daughter-in-law? She was divorced from my son two years ago.

I have been looking after her ever since her divorce, and we are very fond of each other. It is not what you think. I only want to marry her so she will be the sole owner of my estate.

Answer soon as I have heart trouble—Borrowed Time.

DEAR BORROWED: Since there is no blood relationship between you and your former daughter-in-law, you may get married in any state.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Forecast for Friday, Oct. 11

ARIES (March 21—April 19): You may be going overboard on situation — or person. Get behind the scenes and see — don't merely accept promises. Perceive and dig — get at facts. Pisces, Virgo individuals could play significant roles. You learn some lessons concerning member of opposite sex.

TAURUS (April 20—May 20): You are stronger than some persons give you credit for being — and you even surprise yourself. Yes, it is time to assume responsibility, to talk about costs, promotions, earnings and dividends. Property appraisal could be very much on agenda.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You get rid of roadblock. Way is cleared for greater freedom of movement. You gain access to byways, side trips — short journey is featured and so is surprise meeting. You are given credit due for recent efforts. Aries, Libra figure prominently.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): New people, new approaches, special collections — these are featured. Leo, Aquarius persons figure in picture. Accent falls on area of Solar horoscope associated with money, earnings, a way of obtaining what you need. Be independent, original and state case with pride.

LEO (July 23—Aug. 22): You get answer to special request. It is affirmative but now you ask do I really want it. You learn more about yourself — and life. Cycle is high and you land on your feet. But you become more responsible for actions — and you realize that love is now more a paramount theme than ever.

VIRGO (Aug. 23—Sept. 22): Social activity accelerates — you see more people and you laugh more, too. Charm is featured and glamor makes a comeback. Most important, you cheer one who is confined to home, hospital. Sagittarius, Gemini persons are featured.

LIBRA (Sept. 23—Oct. 22): You get wish but you work for it. You receive love but you earn it. No one hands you something for nothing. Know it and act like you are aware of it. Professional associate gives you credit but wants something in return. You do some growing up and that results in ultimate gain.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Changes occur in professional area. You find what others are thinking, doing. You get inside information. Civic project could lead to advancement. Know it and be co-operative. Get thoughts on paper; submit theme, concept, campaign or format.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22—Dec. 21): Your ability to judge the motives of others is brought into play. Taurus, Libra persons are likely to be involved. Accent is on getting your message written, delivered and legally improved. You will soon comprehend!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22—Jan. 19): You must go beyond the obvious. What glitters is not gold, but a highly contrived situation. Know it and be prepared to seek alternatives. Message should become increasingly clear. Pisces, Virgo are likely to be in picture.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20—Feb. 18): Be ready with necessary legal papers. Show that you've done your homework. Capricorn, Cancer and Virgo individuals tend to be involved. Accent is on partnership, marriage — an ability to relate to those whose views do not coincide with your own.

PISCES (Feb. 19—March 20): A specific court, which you have followed for some time, is due to change. A "retirement" could alter your lifestyle. Your counsel is sought — and you could become active in area that was foreign to you.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a natural teacher, interested in justice and highly intuitive. You may have changed residence this year — February and November indicated as outstanding months. Aquarius, Leo persons play significant roles in your life — and Cancer, too. You have made peace at home and you are a better person for so doing.

Rhyme and Reason —And Alligator Pie

By KIT COLLINS
Times Satff

A half-hearted giggle broadened to a gurgle and ended in a grin as the rhyming reasonings of poet Dennis Lee enfolded amidst a pint-sized audience at the Greater Victoria Public Library.

"Billy Batter what's the matter?
How come you're so sad?
I lost my cat
In the laundromat
And a dragon ran off with my dad."

Strictly a heavyweight among Canadian poets the 35-year-old Lee is in his element. His poems are meant to be said, not read.

"One thing I discovered is that the words should never be sacred," says the Torontonian who's approaching the threshold of Canadian renown.

"A rhyme is meant to be used, and that means changing it again and again. For children's verse passes around in weird and wonderful versions and the changes always make sense to the tongue and the ear."

He advises the parent: "If your child inadvertently rewrites some of these poems, please take his version more seriously than mine."

Lee started off a six-week tour of western and eastern Canada here to read the poems and promote two collections of his children's verse: Alligator Pie and Nicholas Knock and Other People, each with vivid and colorful illustrations by Frank Newfeld.

There's a heady expectation in literary circles that the books, published by MacMillan of Canada, will prove to be genuine Canadian children's classics. MacMillan's printing 10,000 copies of Alligator Pie and 7,500 of Nicholas Knock, designed for the older youngsters.

LEE . . . a heavyweight.

Alligator Pie is for children at the knee-bouncing stage. And a titter received the opening lines from that particular poem in the library.

"Alligator pie,
Alligator pie,
If I don't get some I think I'm gonna die."

Who ever heard of Alligator pie, but why not?

The poet is trying to insert a "zing, bounce, vitality into traditional kid's poetry; poetry about modern day life, not Mother Goose, or shepherds blowing their horns, but laundromats and parking meters "and good old down-home Canadian history:

"William Lyon
Mackenzie King,
Sat in the middle and played with string
And he loved his mother like anything.
William Lyon
Mackenzie King."

It's a goal — "just to make a good poem that grows out of our own time and place — a successful side-result would mean parents might even learn to get back a sense of play."

And it all started with a little girl in Toronto who demanded a poem at bed-time. Lee said he knew lots of nursery rhymes but "none of them seemed just right for a small Canadian about to go off to sleep."

Now his two daughters, 11 and eight, have final scrutinizing duty as each of the rhymes roll off his pen. Lee's been writing nine years.

He was a university teacher, has edited books with Toronto's House of Ananci, but now it's full time poetry.

He's not big on talking about himself. His material just "pops into his mind" and when conversation verges onto personal views, there's a quick ricochet to the particulars of poetry.

Listening to poetry like Lee's is no passive role. He advises parents to pause at the rhyme-word and let the child complete it. "I had never realized how soon a child can take part in doing poems. A two-year-old will join in.

"The main thing I learned is invisible. There is a class of poem who's only virtue is that it Contains A Worthy Sentiment, or Deals with The Child's Real World. Adults sometimes tolerate these wretched exercises, thinking they must be literature. Young children, I can report, don't."

But then, the conversation is merging with personal philosophy, so back to the results:

"When they bring me a plate
Full of stuff that I hate
Like spinach and turnips and guck
I sit very straight and
I look at the plate
'YUCK'."

Classic Themes Still Dominate Children's Books

By ANNE CRUTCHER

WASHINGTON (WP)—Parents and teachers who fret because children spend so much time in front of the tube don't really want the kids racketing around the house instead; the alternative they have in mind is for them to read books.

Well, tube or no tube, a lot of children do read books—enough to keep a lot of authors and illustrators going, not to mention booksellers, librarians and grandmothers who like to give presents.

What kind of books do they read? Some that are works of art—comparing favorably with the best books for grownups, a surprising number that parents and even grandparents, read when they were children; and a great many new ones pushing the moral and intellectual fads of the adult world.

Nobody has done much qualifying of who reads what and why in children's books, but talking to librarians, school people and publishers brings out certain unmistakable trends. One of the most-dynamic is for children to keep liking what they've always liked.

Magic, of the ancient fairy-tale kind, romantic happenings in distant times and out-of-the-way places; anthropomorphized animals; mystery adventures with children discovering the secret, and dramas of good against evil.

Sometimes children like these ingredients in time-honored form — "Snow White" and "Little Women" and "Treasure Island" seem to have it for the ages — but they're receptive to newer manifestations of genius too. E. B. White's "Charlotte's Web" has become a classic in the last 20 years, and Maurice Sendak seems as solid as Shakespeare after the mere 11 years that have passed since he published "Where the Wild Things Are."

When Sendak's "Wild Things" first came out, some people, including a psychologist or two, thought it was too strong in the way it put visible teeth and claws on the terrors of the dark. However, today's consensus is that it provides a transcendent experience for the scared child because Max, the little boy sent to bed without supper for being "wild," meets the horrors of the night head on and dominates them before comeing back to the secure and comforting aspects of a child's bed.

VITAMIN C COUNT LOWER IN SMOKERS

OTTAWA (CP)—Smokers have about 30 per cent less vitamin C in their blood than non-smokers.

This recent discovery was made from data gathered during a Nutrition Canada survey of the nutritional health of more than 20,000 people.

The findings, released here, also were reported Wednesday at a conference on vitamin C at the New York Academy of Sciences by Dr. Omer Pelletier of the federal health protection branch.

Researchers found that the median level of vitamin C in the blood of smokers was 30 per cent lower than that of non-smokers, but for those smoking more than 20 cigarettes a day, the median level was 40 per cent lower than that of non-smokers.

Toronto Teacher Pushes Democracy in Classroom

TORONTO (CP) — Pearl Cassel, a Toronto author and public school teacher, is encouraging her pupils to develop through democracy a concept she incorporates in classroom discussion.

Mrs. Cassel, who with Rudolph Dreikurs wrote the 1972 publication Discipline Without Tears, said in an interview classroom democracy modified the child's motivation so he wants to learn, not misbehave and interfere with the rights of his classmates.

Discipline Without Tears, which has sold 28,000 copies in North America, is based on a democratic classroom philosophy evolved from the teachings of noted Austrian psychiatrist Alfred Adler and his student Dr. Dreikurs.

In Mrs. Cassel's classroom, group discussions sometimes led by students help the children identify their problems and work out solutions with the help of their friends.

Walter, a grade 3 pupil, found encouragement when he confessed a laziness problem and learned he was not alone.

"I eat raisins and they help me," one helpful friend suggested.

Other pupils suggested running around a lot at recess, or going to bed early to prevent fatigue.

By acting as a leader instead of an autocratic boss, Mrs. Cassel said her techniques helped a class with many emotionally disturbed children improve their reading ability by an average of three years.

"Maintaining classroom discipline is not taught in teachers' colleges," Mrs. Cassel said, "so many teachers depend on their traditional authority. But we live in a democracy."

She has spread her message of democracy to more than 1,500 teachers across the province for the ministry of education, suggesting that teachers influence, not force, sell ideas not impose them, encourage instead of criticize, and throw out the classic behavior modification approach of reward and punishment.

Metric Switch To Hike Costs

HALIFAX (CP) — Consumers will pay higher prices for food during the initial change to the metric system, says Bill Daman, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Horticultural Council.

He told a meeting of the Atlantic Fresh Produce Association there will be big changes in packaging which will ultimately be of benefit because there will be fewer sizes on the market. But the initial change-over would cost a lot of money because old packages would have to be destroyed and new ones purchased.

Paradiso Not French, Nor Farce

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Expertise among the cast and in the stage design, backed by a neatly translated typical Feydeau script, makes Victoria theatre Guild's Hotel Paradiso at McPherson Playhouse, a reasonably entertaining affair.

As seen Wednesday it could do with considerable upping of the tempo. But if the overall performance lacked the characteristic French sizzle, several effective and amusing portraits were provided.

Whether a more efficient cracking of the whip by the directors (Bert and Michael Farr) could have brought this company closer to the ideal performance, is conjecture.

The fact is that the production comes out as neither French nor farce, but in the guise of an English situation comedy. And if this was the concept from the outset then it has achieved a high percentage of its goal.

The Feydeau formula provides a bird-boned plot involving an assortment of husbands and wives and young people in cross-purposed assignations at the adjoining villas of Monsieurs' Boniface (Brian Lenton) and Cot (Jack Droy) and in the Hotel Paradiso.

There is even that inescapable Feydeau character, the man with the speech impediment, engagingly played by Colin Skinner.

Lenton has an outstanding natural sense of comedy. He milks the role of the downtrodden husband, making light-hearted use of all the sight-gag cliches in the book.

He is almost alone in making use of the front-playing, audience-aside technique and in that comes closer to farce style than anyone else. An exception in a tiny but effective role, is Dougal Fraser.

In fact this lack of a uniform style among the cast weakens the ensemble playing and is, aside from the tempo, the principal fault with the production.

Carolyn Stephenson gives a buoyant comedy performance and Sheila Litt and Penny Devlin, competent but very English characterizations.

Jack Droy as the other husband, a fluttery quartet of young girls (Chris Polson, Helen Wilson, Laurie Rossiter and Janet Christensen) and a neat cameo bit by director Bert Farr, are among the pluses of the production.

Hotel Paradiso continues through Saturday with curtain at 8:15 p.m.

MAYOR NEY RUNS AGAIN

NANAIMO — Mayor Frank New will run for at least one more term and four of the six aldermen will also seek re-election in November.

The incumbents are Gertrude Hall, Kenneth Medland, Gino Sedola and William Hunter.

Two other aldermen, Sandy McKay and Arnold Dugan, have not yet decided to run if Nanaimo is amalgamated with surrounding areas after a vote Nov. 2.

The area now called Nanaimo will be represented by just three rather than six aldermen if amalgamation is approved.

W. Germany, U.K. Top in Price War

PARIS (Reuter) — West Germany and Britain had the best records among major industrial countries in August in fighting inflation, statistics released today by the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) show.

Consumer prices showed no rise at all in West Germany and went up by only 0.1 per cent in Britain, said the figures which are based solely on information provided by the countries themselves.

Consumer prices in August went up one per cent in Canada and 1.2 per cent in the U.S.

In Britain's case, the 0.1-per cent price rise compared with a jump of 0.9 per cent in July. A cut in value added tax was a factor in the improved picture in Britain, economic observers believe.

In other major OECD countries, prices rose 0.8 per cent in France, 2.3 per cent in Italy and one per cent in Japan.

West Germany had the best record of major countries during the 12-month period, with consumer prices rising 6.9 per cent.

Canada followed with 10.8 per cent, the United States figure was 11.2 per cent, France 14.5 per cent, Britain 16.9 per cent, Italy 20.4 per cent and Japan 25.4 per cent.

TRUCKS DISTURB LANGFORD PUPILS

Parents and teachers at Langford elementary school want noisy trucks rerouted so they don't pass directly in front of the school.

"Teachers have to stop teaching when noisy trucks go by the school," the school's Parents' Association president Owna Henderson said Wednesday.

The trucks go right from low to high gear while passing the school, said the principal, causing a real noise problem.

The school, near the Jacklin-Goldstream intersection, has had problems with heavy traffic since Jacklin was made a through road to the Trans-Canada Highway, said the principal.

Henderson has been trying to get traffic lights installed at the intersection for the students' safety and the need for lights is being investigated.

Lights would help protect children from the trucks, she said.

Further action on both traffic lights and possible truck rerouting will be discussed at a parent-teacher meeting Oct. 21.

"Care Enough To Get The Finest"

Strike a match

"Weekender" from Butte Knit.
Four pretty pieces make a whole fall and winter wardrobe. Take the eye-catching shell and jacket of soft blue polyester knit, fashionably highlighted with muted Chevron stripe and classic geometrics. Use them to top the complementing skirt with its all around pleats: you've got a skirt-sweater-jacket combination that's hard to beat. Then for more sporty occasions, pair the jacket with the well-tailored, fashionably flared slacks: you're beautifully co-ordinated and very comfortably casual. In sizes 8 to 18. At one beautiful price:
just $140.00

A new word in fashion.

Sure-fire anytime.
The casually perfect pantsuit by Butte Knit is a real standout. Easy care, easy wear polyester looks and feels like a genuine hand-knit. Three pieces work this magic — a V-neck shell to show a puff of collar, fashionable slacks, and a belted cardigan with rolled shawl collar. The soft beige colour lets you add highlight accessories to match your mood. It's a winner in sizes 10 to 18. At Gray's:
just $140.00

Full Labor Rights for Farm Workers Costly for Consumers, Hearing Told

British Columbians will have to pay higher food costs if farm workers are granted the full benefits of provincial labor laws, a legislative committee was told Wednesday.

Farm workers should have the same rights as other workers in society, said the B.C. Federation of Agriculture, but the high cost of providing those rights must eventually be passed on to the consumer.

"We do not hesitate to say this," the federation told the committee, "for it has been a national and provincial policy for too long to maintain a 'cheap food' policy."

Representatives of the federation were the first group to appear before the legislature's labor and justice committee at its first day of hearings in Victoria.

The committee began a three-week provincial tour today, starting in Parksville, and will hold similar hearings in 11 other locations on the question of including farm and domestic workers under the protection of B.C. labor legislation.

Under existing laws, the two groups are not covered under the umbrella of the new B.C. Labor Code, the Workers' Compensation Act and other protective legislation guaranteeing minimum wages, holiday pay, hours of work and payment of wages.

Domestic workers were barely mentioned at the three hours of hearings Wednesday as committee members concentrated on the thorny question of farm workers' wages.

The federation said farmers agree that minimum wages should be paid their farm help and, according to their research, wages exceeding $2.50 an hour minimum "is the general rule plus the fact that many farmers provide accommodation, food and certain other privileges."

But unless the "piece work" system of payment is maintained in certain areas of agriculture, the industry will collapse, said Richard Stocks, secretary-manager of the federation.

When crops are ready to be picked they must be picked as quickly as possible or they will be lost, he said. Therefore, the piece work system has the benefit of rapid harvesting of perishable crops and also provides an incentive for higher earnings.

In the cherry industry, for example, at eight cents a pound a good picker can earn $32 a day, compared with $20 for the minimum wage. Many pickers are slower however and earn less than minimum wage.

Federation spokesmen said slow pickers, often children, would have no incentive to work harder if they were guaranteed the minimum wage. The cost of the crops would therefore skyrocket.

But the B.C. Federation of Labor, which submitted a brief supporting classification of both groups of workers under labor legislation, said employees should not be expected to subsidize their employers.

"There can be no justification for the exploitation of a small group of workers or the denial of their rights simply to provide profit for the employers," said their brief.

"If it can be proven that employers cannot afford to pay fair wages and working conditions, other means of subsidization can and must be found."

Federation of Labor spokesman Carolyn Gibbons urged the committee to use its powers of subpeona to call labor contractors "and to hear first hand of the exploitation of agricultural workers in B.C."

Labor contractors are operating in the Fraser Valley, and are depriving farm workers, often immigrants who do not realize the situation, of their basic rights, she said.

Cattle rancher Guy Rose told the committee, however, that farmers in the Lower Mainland know the contractors are unsavory and unscrupulous but they are often forced to turn to them because they cannot find farm help themselves. They agree to pay the contractor a certain price and he, in return, pays the workers.

A handful of individual farmers appeared before the committee and confirmed that farm costs are high and it is difficult to find farm labor.

Saanich farmer Geoff Vantreight says he would not object to paying his help minimum wages, providing all farmers did the same, but it would probably push up his food costs about 30 per cent.

Vantreight said full-time farm workers generally do receive minimum wages but in his own case about 90 per cent of workers are seasonal and again they must be paid on a piece work basis to make his operations profitable.

$4.5 Million Expected From Lottery

EDMONTON (CP) — The first Western Canada Lottery should raise more than $4.5 million, says lottery general manager Guy Simonis.

Ticket sales for more than $750,000 worth of prizes ended Wednesday.

First prize in the lottery is $250,000, with a second prize of $100,000, a third prize of $50,000, and five $25,000 prizes.

Simonis said 1900 prizes of $100 will be awarded in the Oct. 23 preliminary draw.

Eight finalists are scheduled to appear in Winnipeg Nov. 2 for the televised final draw.

The general manager predicted Manitoba would sell about 800,000 of the $2.50 tickets with British Columbia selling 700,000, Alberta 300,000 and Saskatchewan 200,000.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A suspended sentence and a year's probation were given a 16-year-old boy in provincial court Wednesday for two break-ins.

Gary Alan Smith, of 1120 McClure, broke into an Oxford Street residence Sept. 16 along with another youth and stole items worth $695.

He also entered, again with another person, a residence on Moss Street Sept.13 and stole goods worth $133.

A 21-year-old woman pleaded guilty to 13 counts of obtaining $199 worth of goods by worthless cheques in May, June and September.

Margaret Burns, address not known, will be sentenced Oct. 23.

Danny Joseph Spittle, 19, of 1139 Burdett, was remanded in custody to Friday after being charged with assaulting Gerald Mullan, and with assaulting and obstructing police May 30.

No plea was entered.

No fuss, no muss baby-feeding
Introducing baby to solid food can be a trying, messy business. Often baby doesn't want it — and lets you know loudly and clearly. An easy, pleasant and agreeable way is to add a piece of a Farley's Baby Feeding Biscuit to baby's bottle at the time of day you have picked for baby's main mealtime. The piece of Farley's will dissolve instantly, thus may be fed through the bottle's nipple without fuss or muss. Baby will love it — baby's appreciation will be that obvious! As baby gets a little older, add a little more Farley's. Farley's Baby Feeding Biscuits are good for growing babies, for Farley's have added Riboflavin, Niacin, Iron and Calcium. Ask for Farley's Baby Feeding Biscuits at your favourite food store.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

During a side game at the National Championships this past summer in New York City, the West defender was to be on lead against South's six-notrump contract. Since he held two aces (in hearts and diamonds), quite naturally, he doubled. But, for some reason, he decided to lead a club as his opening lead. Twelve tricks later he had to choose which ace to discard — and he guessed the wrong one, so declarer made an overtrick.

His partner remarked caustically: "It looks like you should have cashed your aces at the start." To which the opening leader replied: "I told you my analyst said I needed a vacation."

In today's deal, East WAS on vacation — or taking a siesta when he should have been home minding the store. The result was that declarer fulfilled a contract that should have been defeated.

Both sides vulnerable.
South deals.

SOUTH

♣ A J

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	Pass	2 ♥	Pass
4 ♥	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

On West's opening lead of the spade king, East signaled violently for a continuation by playing the nine. West next led the spade queen, on which East dropped the deuce. A third spade lead was then ruffed by South.

Declarer drew trumps in three rounds, after which he laid down the king of diamonds. When East won this with his ace, the defenders had made their last trick.

East played badly on the opening lead when he signaled for a spade continuation. He should have recognized that West's lead of the king indicated that West possessed the queen. And East should have been desirous of getting his singleton ace of diamonds out of the way in order to be able to ruff a second diamond lead. This could have been accomplished in simple fashion.

The king of spades should have been overtaken by East's ace, after which the diamond ace would be cashed. To trick three, a low spade would be led to West's known queen.

West would surely recognize that the only reason for East's "squandering" of the spade ace, and the cashing of the diamond ace at trick two, was that the diamond ace was a singleton. A diamond return by West would now be ruffed by East — and declarer would be down a trick.

Hospital Costs Up

VANCOUVER (CP)— Planned expansion of 10 Greater Vancouver hospitals must be hastened or the costs could be $600 million, according to Allan Kelly, chairman of the Greater Vancouver Regional District.

He announced plans for an advisory committee of eight to 10 architects and construction experts who will try to cut the projected construction time in half.

Kelly said the original program was expected to cost $95 million.

"If inflation continues at the present rate and the present pace of construction continues ... it might cost $600 million," he said.

9 IN MEMORIAM

HEASLIP — In loving memory of our wife, mother and grandmother Colleen M. Heaslip who passed away October 10, 1972.
Time speeds on, two years have passed
Since death its gloom, its shadow cast
Within our home, where all seemed bright,
And took from us a shining light.
We miss that light, and ever will.
Her vacant place there's none to fill.
Down here we mourn, but not in vain,
For up in heaven we will meet again.
—Sadly missed by Don, Donna, Jane, Judy, Janice, Doug, Jason.

LEEK — In memory of our beloved wife and mother Tena, who passed away October 10, 1973.
Peacefully sleeping, resting at last.
The world's weary trouble and trials are past.
In silence she suffered, in patience she bore,
Till God called her home to suffer no more.
—Lovingly remembered by Jack and family.

WEIZEL — In loving memory of our dear son, Dennis David Weizel, accidently in Winnipeg, Manitoba, October 10, 1973.
Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear;
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for the thought to reach.
Sweet to remember him who once was here,
And who, though absent, is just as dear.
—Ever remembered and loved, Mom and Dad.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE. SANDS.

Begonia Tubers Easy to Store

Begonia tubers are so much more easily stored during winter than either fuchsias or zonal geraniums that it's a wonder they are not used in every garden and on every balcony.

The plants give a long display of handsome foliage and showy flowers, frequently going through to Thanksgiving or later before submitting to weather.

Have you noticed that begonias, as well as several other semi-tropical plants, resist several degrees of frost of short duration, at the end of the season, whereas in spring they wilt immediately at temperatures below 40 degs.F.?

The growth is stronger at the end of summer. Also, the weather gets cooler gradually. The gradual cooling hardens the growth so that a degree or two lower on successive nights (or at sunrise, as it has been so far this fall) makes little difference.

When rain occurs you will find tuberous begonias along with many other summer flowers, will bid farewell in a sodden mass.

If your begonias are in a ground bed or in a planter you should lift out the plants still with soil around the roots.

Place them in a shallow wood box or flat (a cardboard carton will have to be used if no wood) and keep them for a week or so in a cool frost-free place.

Each day remove fallen flowers and leaves to prevent fungus disease on the tubers. Do not pull off the stems or the tubers will be damaged.

By the time all leaves and stems have been taken away, the soil will have dried on the tubers. Then gently rub them clean of the old roots and remaining soil. Be very careful of the hollow top where next year's sprouts will come.

Next, find some clean sand for storing the tubers over winter. They must be prevented from drying out, yet must not become damp. Sand is the ideal storage medium.

The winter storage place will probably be the difficulty. The temperature should be just around 40 degs.F. to keep them totally dormant yet not harmed by frost.

Thus far these suggestions apply equally to balcony gardeners, but where in an apartment will a moderate temperature be found?

If you want to keep the tubers for growing next year you will have to figure that out for yourselves.

The small flowered Begonia semperflorens make nice house plants in an east or south window during winter if the air indoors is not too dry. These begonias have fibrous roots not tuberous roots.

Long stems even though with flowers, can be cut down now to where you see tiny new growths at the base. Pot, or repot, the plants into fine compost and sand, leaving an inch space at the top. Don't overwater. When new growth begins, treat as any semi-tropical pot plant — water well occasionally; never allow to dry out, nor to remain soggy.

BUS WITH US
REDWING
The better bus tour

DISNEYLAND from $172.50
Wonderful winter beauty all the way down the coast — through Washington and into Oregon. Overnight in California's colorful capital, Sacramento. Welcome yourself to the "wonderful world of Disney" — fun for kids from 8 to 80! Entrance fee and 15 attractions included! Want a real Mexican taco? Here's your chance. Tijuana's your next stop, or stay borderbound and visit world famous San Diego Zoo. Want a little peek back into the Old West — Knott's Berry Farm is the order of the day with Japanese Deer Village just for the fun of it. If you really want to say you've seen it all — visit Universal Studios. Had enough? Come on back home.
Fun packages and side tours included FREE!

MULTI-LEVEL
Mighty Convenient
$79,500

The price is right for this brand new beauty. No home can exceed the style or common sense design of a four-level split for the modern family. There's space to S-P-R-E-A-D-O-U-T and enjoy your family without falling over them. The "zoned" design is preplanned for additional development. The common sense is carried over to the built-in convenience features and the one-piece fibreglass bath tub, shower unit and vanity tops. Quality construction is apparent from exterior red brick veneer to ribbon-grain mahogany kitchen cabinets. Compare this 1,500 sq. ft. home on a 95 ft. frontage lot for value with anything else in an equally prestigeous location and see what I mean. You want to hear more? Perhaps discuss a trade? Call:

Saanich firemen were at the right place at the right time Wednesday night.

While attending a small grass fire on McKenzie at 8:25 p.m. they spotted flames leaping out of the back of an abandoned house opposite 2271 Edgelow.

They moved their equipment across the street and quickly put out the blaze.

Damage was confined to the kitchen and attic.

Police are investigating the possibility of arson.

Treated Like a Lady, Says Hostage Envoy

Times News Services

SANTO DOMINGO — A U.S. woman official freed from a 13-day kidnap ordeal at the hands of leftist guerrillas says she was treated "like a lady and a diplomat" and grew to like her courteous captors.

"We hostages got to know them and even to like them a little under the necessity of sharing food and water," Barbara Hutchison said.

The seven guerrillas ended their siege at the Venezuelan consulate Wednesday night, freeing their seven hostages unharmed and flying off to asylum in Panama.

In Panama City, moustached guerrilla chief Radames Mendez Vargas arrived with his ragtag band and said, "a war is not lost with one battle. There will be other actions against the Dominican government.

"The tremendous show of force by the Dominican government never impressed us," Mendez Vargas said.

"The Communists turned their backs on us and the government tried to lower our moral position. Our movement was prohibited by the traitorous government.

"We are a little worn out. We have been without food and water for days and are completely exhausted. But we forced (President) Joaquin Balaguer into this position."

CRIPPLE 23 YEARS ON RUN

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Crippled in his teens, James Ward hobbled from job to job through 50 states and 23 years, always looking back for the federal agent he knew would someday arrest him.

In San Antonio, Tex., several days ago, Ward went to San Fernando cemetery to see his father's grave. Beside it was a tombstone with his own name on it.

Ward knew it was time to end his days as a federal fugitive, a role he began by failing to register for the Korean War draft.

He was in hospital when he turned 18 and faced selective service registration.

His sister drove him to the draft board office a few months later.

"They took one look at him, one look at his legs and told him he would never have to register again," she said.

Then the warrants began.

Old Song From Clay To Wax . . .

RENO (UPI) — Two musicians have recorded what they said is the oldest known piece of written music.

George Staschek, pianist and a scholar of ancient music, Wednesday said the 10-minute hymn is the sumerian Song of The Gods, written on clay tablets more than 4,000 years ago.

The tablets were translated by scholars and printed by the Cambridge University press in 1936, but this is the first time the hymn has been recorded "as a living piece of music," he said.

He called the hymn a forerunner of the Gregorian chant which deals with the creation of man.

"It radiates with the spirit of prosperity and well-being — remarkablp different from the lamentations of the Gregorian chant," he said.

The words to the piece were sung by baritone Will Lamm to Staschek's accompanient on piano and harpsichord.

Staschek said the tablets were found in the Sun Temple of Nineveh in what is now Iraq.

WASHINGTON — Rep. Wilbur Mills was intoxicated and bleeding from his nose and scratches on his face when U.S. Park police stopped his car for speeding at 2 a.m. Monday, U.S. Park Police said Wednesday.

A 38-year-old woman companion in the car with Mills, House Ways and Means committee, also was intoxicated, Assistant Chief Franklin Arthur said. She was identified as a stripper who has an apartment in the same building where Mills resides.

STOCKHOLM — The Nobel Prize for physiology or medicine was awarded jointly today to three doctors, Albert Claude, Christian de Duve and George Palade for "their discoveries concerning the structural and functional organization of the cell."

The three share a $124,000 prize.

LONDON — Lord Marples, a former transport minister who started Britain's Don't Drink and Drive campaign, was fined $108 and his license was taken away when he pleaded guilty to drunken driving.

MARSEILLE, France — The Marseilles drug squad has tracked down a man who was sentenced to 20 years in prison in absentia at the French Connection drug trial here earlier this year, police sources said today. They identified him as Joseph Marro, 58.

NO MORE NIGGERS ON THE MAINE MAP

AUGUSTA (UPI) — The Maine Mapping Advisory Committee voted Wednesday to conduct a search of all state documents and maps for use of the word "Nigger" in rivers, islands and hills, and asked the governor to declare them not to be used anymore.

Black State Rep. Gerald Talbot said he came across the "nigger" placenames in a turn-of-the-century geographical compendium.

"I noticed that at least nine hills and lakes and brooks were named 'Nigger,' and that's a very offensive and derogatory word used against a minority people," Talbot said.

State geologist Robert Doyle said Wednesday his office will also submit to the U.S. Interior Department alternate names for inclusion in all newly-printed federal maps.

Talbot and Doyle agreed that the new names should attempt to keep some kind of historical significance, if possible.

MORE PAYING THROUGH NOSE

CRESTON (CP)—Premier Dave Barrett says bad drivers will continue "to pay through the nose until they smarten up and become better drivers."

Barrett made the comment Wednesday after he said the government has made no decision on elimination of the $10 driver certificate.

He said at a luncheon that regardless of changes made, the penalty point system will be maintained to assess financial penalties against drivers with bad records.

Under the present Autoplan program, penalty points are assessed against drivers for traffic violations and anyone with more than six points in a year is forced to pay a special assessment to a maximum of $420.

Barrett's travels Wednesday—the third day of his two-week public relations tour of the province—started in Nelson, then took him to Salmo and Creston and wound up with a public rally in Trail where he again told an audience of 600 the government would "sock it to the bad drivers."

FIRST STEP IN WILKINSON ROAD PHASE-OUT

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Forty prisoners likely will move to a new trailer camp near Jordan River in the first move toward phasing out antiquated Wilkinson Road jail by the end of the year.

Hal McGillivray, deputy director of the prison, said Wednesday the corrections branch is acquiring 40 acres in the provincial forest reserve seven miles beyond Jordan River on the road to Port Renfrew.

He said four acres will be developed into a campsite consisting of dormitory trailers for 40 of the 90 men at Wilkinson Road, as well as trailers for cooking, recreation, office and storage.

Initial outlay for the new camp is expected to be $100,000. The figure does not include costs for clearing or installing basic services.

McGillivray, who is implementing the program, said he hoped to complete a budget by next week.

It will be reviewed by a special three-member panel which the attorney-general's department struck last month to consider alternative programs for the men in Wilkinson Road jail.

The members include Ed Stanton, probation officer in the Victoria area; Martin McNeil, a University of Victoria graduate student, and Ted Pollard, a Victoria lawyer.

McGillivray hoped work on the site could begin within two weeks.

There is a 30-day delivery on the trailers, he said.

"We would like to be able to start the program by the end of November . . . although it could be anytime between now and Christmas."

The inmates — all minimum to medium security risks and serving sentences of less than two years — will not be involved in setting up the camp, but will make improvements to the property.

Rayonier of Canada holds a tree farm licence on the 40-acre site and McGillivray hopes the licence will be transferred to the corrections service. The company reforested the area in 1957.

Ferry Fare Boost Hinted

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Transport Minister Bob Strachan hinted today that B.C. Ferries fares may be increasing soon and inflation may also force an increase in next year's Autoplan premiums.

Car and passenger fares on B.C. Ferries have not increased since the service began in 1960, said Strachan, and the system has suffered annual operating deficits since 1967.

This year's deficit may be as high as $20 million, he said.

While not actually confirming the possibility of rate increases Strachan said he has asked for a report to be prepared on the ferries financial status.

He called B.C. Ferries the "best ferry bargain in the world" and noted huge increases in operating costs, especially the cost of fuel and labor.

Last week B.C. Ferries increased its commercial rates.

Speaking during the taping of B.C. TV's Capital Comment program, Strachan announced that a full statement on Autoplan will be made at the end of this month.

At that time ICBC will disclose its premium for next year, as well as any new programs or subsidies.

Strachan evaded the question of whether drivers' certificates may be cancelled next year and said the entire 1975 program will be announced at the end of the month.

Again Strachan would not confirm the possibility of premium increases next year and he said "people will be happy with the rate structure."

But he told reporters that private insurance companies in the rest of Canada were predicting a $20 million loss this year despite two rate increases in the last 12 months.

He also cited increases in the accident rate and the cost of repairs.

Also on the topic of ICBC, Strachan said the government is negotiating with insurance agents on the commission they will receive for selling government insurance next year.

The agents had originally agreed to a seven per cent basic commission, but are now complaining the rate is too low.

JOAN KENNEDY

Joan Kennedy Charged

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Joan Kennedy, the wife of Senator Edward Kennedy (Dem. Mass.), has been charged with driving under the influence of alcohol after her convertible crashed into two other cars stopped for a street light.

Fairfax County police said the charge on conviction carries maximum penalties of a year in jail and a $1,000 fine, and suspension of driver's licence for six months. Police said, however, that such penalties are reserved for grave cases that usually involve injuries or fleeing the scene of the accident, circumstances that don't exist in Mrs. Kennedy's case.

Police said Mrs. Kennedy was administered a breath analysis test, but they would not disclose the results. The charge of driving under the influence is the only charge in the state of Virginia if alcohol or drugs are found above a certain level.

No one was injured in the crash.

DOW SOARS

NEW YORK — The stock market advanced again today, continuing the strongest rally in months.

TRASHMEN TO EARN $18,400

ANCHORAGE (AP) — Garbage collectors have won a three-year contract calling for $18,400 a year in the pact's final year after a 39-day strike.

Municipal trade unions returned to work Wednesday after reaching agreement with the city on a contract that raises wages 46.5 per cent over three years, a city spokesman said.

The wage hikes are retroactive to Jan. 1.

Riot Team Cools Boston

Times News Services

BOSTON — Four hundred riot-trained state and metropolitan police arrived in racially torn Boston today to help protect children and enforce a court-ordered plan to integrate Boston's public school.

Busloads of black children quietly entered schools in the neighborhood.

The extra policemen, outfitted with riot gear, were ordered into the area by Gov. Francis Sargent after a federal judge rejected Mayor Kevin White's request for 125 federal marshals to help keep the peace.

In Washington, President Ford said the court-ordered busing "in my judgment, was not the best solution to quality education in Boston."

He added, however, "I think it's of maximum importance for the citizens of Boston to respect the law."

Street violence Wednesday was centred in the predominently black Roxbury section, as it was the previous day.

Until Tuesday, most of the violence was in the white South Boston section.

At least 14 arrests and 11 injuries were reported Wednesday as black youths threw rocks at buses and cars and looted stores in the Roxbury section.

Fights were reported inside Hyde Park High School, resulting in the suspension of 19 students.

City-wide school attendance shrank to 60.1 per cent. One elementary school was closed early as a safety measure.

A white man, James Horan, 33, was dragged from his car and beaten by blacks in Roxbury, apparently in retaliation for the similar beating of a black in South Boston on Monday.

He was admitted to hospital with serious head injuries.

In South Boston, the black bus driver of a city bus and a white female passenger were injured when the bus was stoned, went out of control and struck a house.

Thieu's Police Kick, Beat Demonstrators, Newsmen

SAIGON (AP) — Hundreds of persons demonstrating against President Nguyen Van Thieu's government marched through downtown Saigon today.

And for the second time in less than two weeks, police beat up Western correspondents covering the protests.

The demonstrations, the biggest against Thieu in three years, were generally free of police interference until a splinter Buddhist group continued to demonstrate in front of the National Assembly after most of the about 1,000 protesters had dispersed.

Uniformed policemen began to scuffle with the stick-wielding Buddhists, who were complaining that police had beaten two of their comrades earlier in the day.

At least six demonstrators were taken to hospital, including a Buddhist nun with a broken leg and a 40-year-old man beaten for carrying an anti-government banner near Saigon's central market.

When Western reporters filmed and photographed the scuffles, men identified by sources close to the police as plainclothes policemen turned on them.

Two reporters—Haney Howell, Saigon bureau chief of CBS, and Time magazine's Barry Hillenbrand—were kicked and beaten.

Howell, who was beaten with Associated Press photographer Neal Ulewich while covering similar demonstrations 10 days ago, was taken to hospital.

Citizenship Wait Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigrants will qualify for Canadian citizenship after three years in this country under legislation introduced today in the Commons.

At present, all immigrants must wait five years before qualifying for citizenship.

"Under the new bill,' 'State Secretary Hugh Faulkner said, "applicants for naturalization are treated alike, regardless of sex or country of origin,"

Female immigrants, regardless of the fact that they marry Canadians, now would have to wait three years like everyone else.

It also would reduce the age of majority to 18 years from 21, which would allow young immigrants 18 or over to apply for citizenship on their own behalf instead of through a parent.

Faulkner, explaining the proposed amendments to the Citizenship Act said they are designed to make the legislation "more equitable, logical and consistent."

The bill also would eliminate differences in rules applying to men and women.

Generally, a woman who marries a Canadian citizen may become a citizen right away, whereas a male immigrant has to wait the normal two or five years.

NEWS BRIEFS

Boats Explode

RICHMOND (CP) — Police and Fraser River harbor authorities are trying to determine if there was loss of life in a boat explosion that destroyed three vessels at Steveston early today.

Richmond fire department officials said they were unable to fight the fires because two of the boats, in flames, had drifted out into the river and the third had sunk when they arrived at the scene at 3 a.m.

Bank Drops Clients

DETROIT (AP) — The Michigan National Bank of Detroit will close all savings accounts with balances under $50 starting next week because of rising handling costs, bank officials said.

Mayo May Close

NANAIMO (CP) — The Mayo Lumber Co. will close its sawmill operation here Dec. 6 unless market conditions in the lumber industry improve, a company spokesman said Wednesday. About one-half its employees are already laid off.

Plot Uncovered

ROME (Reuter) — Italy's anti-terrorism police squad has arrested four right-wingers on charges of plotting to kill leading Italian politicians as a prelude to a coup d'etat, the interior ministry said.

Britons Stream To Polls

Times News Services

LONDON — A bomb scare today forced evacuation of Liberal party headquarters in London as Britons streamed to the polls.

Police searched the building but found nothing and allowed staff to return after 35 minutes.

It apparently was a hoax, police said.

The Liberal headquarters was also ransacked in a break-in on election eve Wednesday.

A spokesman said at first "this looks like another Watergate." Police later sai dit appeared to be a plain case of burglary.

A bomb scare also delayed voting in Belfast.

If the forecasts of all the major pollsters are to be believed, the governing Labor party was a heavy favorite to be returned to power. But the polls have been dead wrong in the past.

This time, pollsters conceded that late shifts by undecided voters and apathy might result in an upset.

Though flattered by the predictions, Home Secretary Roy Jenkins insisted on the eve of the election:

"It's not going to be quiet as easy or as decisive as that."

Prime Minister Harold Wilson, however, said be believed Labor to be "on the eve of a great victory."

Bonn Spies Preyed on Own Bosses

BONN (WP) — A former cabinet minister charged Wednesday that the West German intelligence service had been involved for years in spying on the country's top political leaders and other prominent citizens.

The ex-minister, Horst Ehmke, said that the intelligence agency, the Federal Information Service, had compiled what he regarded as illegal dossiers on 54 persons, including two former chancellors and two former presidents.

Testifying before a parliamentary investigating committee, Ehmke said that the list of those put under surveillance included leaders of all the West German political parties and persons prominent in academic, military and other fields.

Among them, Ehmke claimed, were former chancellors Willy Brandt and Ludwig Erhard and former presidents Gustav Heinemann and Heinrich Luebke.

Others that he named included Christian Democratic leaders Rainer Barzel and Franz-Josef Strauss; Erich Mende, former chairman of the Free Democratic party; Gen. Hans Speidel former general inspector of the armed forces, and Simon Wiesenthal, director of the Nazi-hunting Jewish Documentation centre in Vienna.

Ehmke's allegations came in the course of testimony before the committee investigating the circumstances that enabled an East German spy, Guenter Guillaume, to win a post on Brandt's chancellory staff.

The uncovering of Guillaume's identity triggered Brandt's resignation as chancellor last May.

Ehmke's allegations seem certain to stir the same kind of debate that was touched off in the United States following revelations that the Central Intelligence Agency had been drawn into the Watergate affair.

The Bonn agency, which is commonly called the BND after its German initials, was created by the CIA during the postwar occupation period and covertly financed by Washington before its absorption into the West German government.

For many years, it was referred to in intelligence circles as the Gehlen bureau, after Gen. Reinhard Gehlen, its first head.

According to Ehmke's testimony Wednesday, the BND's domestic spying activities began during Gehlen's tenure and continued after his retirement in the mid 1960s. Ehmke said he learned of them when the Brandt government took office in 1969 and he was assigned supervision over the intelligence organization as part of his duties in the chancellory office.

GRAIN BILL VOTED

OTTAWA (CP) — Back-to-work legislation to end the six-week Vancouver grain-handlers strike received final Commons approval today.

The leigslation, which now goes to the Senate, passed by a voice vote without debate.

Following debate in the Senate, the bill must be given royal assent. It becomes law the day after royal assent.

The legislation ends the strike and imposes a settlement based on a conciliation report prepared by Dr. Neil Perry of Victoria.

Henry Kancs, secretary-treasurer of the 550-member Grain Workers' Union, said Wednesday the workers could have export grain moving again by Tuesday if the legislation is passed without delay.

The bill was approved by the Commons labor committee after four hours of discussion Wednesday night. The Conservatives criticized the government for not allowing witnesses other than Labor Minister John Munro and department officials to give their views on events during the 10 months of bargaining.

Bringing the Tension Back Home

By JON NORDHEIMER
New York Times News

GILROY, Calif. — Home.

For nearly six years of exile in Canada as an American military deserter, Gary Della Bitta had thought of little else.

So it was disconcerting that his first hours of homecoming back in the two-bedroom frame house on Rosanna Street were filled with a tension he had carried with him from Vancouver.

He was one of the first to leave Canada and accept the conditions of President Ford's amnesty program. Now he was back home in Gilroy, a farm centre in the Santa Clara Valley of Central California about 80 miles south of San Francisco, and he was later surprised at how irritable he was when he first walked in the front door and saw the photograph.

"What's that?" he asked, his voice rising. He had taken a few steps into the living room, stopped dead in his tracks, and his brown eyes nearly drove a hole in the wall opposite the front door.

Midway up the wall, in a cluster of family pictures, was a color photograph of him in the olive green dress uniform of the United States Army.

"I don't believe it, you gotta be kidding," he exclaimed and advanced in quick, cat-like steps and snatched the framed photograph from the wall.

Just as quickly, his mother retrieved the picture from his hands and returned it to its hook, and placed her body between the smiling photograph and her frowning son.

"It's still Gary, I don't care what he's wearing," she said, seeking support from a relative, Mary Fortina, who stood with arms folded near the entrance to the kitchen, looking amused. "It's a nice picture, the uniform doesn't matter." Mrs. Della Bitta said over her son's shoulder to her husband, Cody, a quiet man, who lingered at the front door. Mrs. Della Bitta studied the feeling.

Later, everyone laughed about the incident, and the photograph remained on the wall where Mrs. Della Bitta wanted it.

After all that had happened, the long years of uncertainty and doubt, the languishing mood of the long grey Vancouver winters, he had thought that his convictions would be fully understood, most of all by those who loved him and knew him best, but the first few days back in Gilroy produced little moments of frustration as communications broke down and efforts to fill the long pauses were awkward as individuals groped for the right words to convey precisely the elusive emotions that had visited the house on Rosanna Street.

Many of the boys in Gary's class of '64 served in Vietnam. Two were killed, Gary, as far as can be determined, was the only war resister who went to Canada.

Why he alone took the path to Canada is a difficult and complex subject that only the friends who lost contact with him after high school attempt to explain easily.

"Gary was a very sensitive kid and his attitudes toward authority were different from the rest of us," remarked Scott Eustis, a backcourt star of the 1964 Gilroy basketball team, who now practices veterinary medicine in Fort Collins, Colo. "I'm certain that the war in Vietnam didn't have a durn thing to do with his desertion. He probably couldn't stand the Army and the way they have of trying to break down individualism."

Mike Kennedy, another team member who went on to earn a law degree and now helps run his father's lumber business in Gilroy, saw it similarly. "he was pretty much of a loner, but I never knew him to have a lack of guts, so I just figured he couldn't put up with the whole Army trip and it would have bugged the hell out of him whether there was a war or not."

Eustis and Kennedy, who were not drafted because of medical or student deferments, both said in interviews that war resisters should be compelled to serve alternative service because "it wouldn't be fair to the guys who went to Vietnam" or it would impair national security in case of a future military emergency.

This contrasts sharply with the feelings of some of Gary's friends who did serve in Vietnam.

Before he went AWOL, the only illegal thing Gary Della Bitta had done in 22 years was to fish out of season, he said while preparing to travel to Indiana this week for processing before final discharge from the Army. He was on the honor role in high school, he said, and had a 3.5 scholastic average in college before the pressures of the draft distracted him from his studies in biology, his major.

Political awareness came after induction and basic training when he angered his sergeants by refusing to sing training songs that went like, "I wanna go to Vietnam and kill a Vietcong!" But when he applied for conscientious objector status, it was denied him and he was sent to the Catholic chaplain who "told me God would watch over me and not to worry because we had the best military machine in the world," he said. "He showed me a film of what it was like to fight for your country."

His older brother Larry had fought through the same country for one year in the Mekong Delta, and "even today he still jumps when he hears a car backfire," Gary said.

When Gary deserted he had the support of his family and that support has not wavered through six years of absence. "if a veteran of Vietnam went against these boys and says they shouldn't have unconditional amnesty," said his father, a ranger at Mt. Madonna Park on the coastal range that overlooks Gilroy, "I'd respect his judgment. But so far I haven't met any."

After a few uneventful days, as it appeared that his home town had no bitterness for him, the native son repacked a bag and flew to Indiana, looking ahead to the task of constructing a new life at the age of 28.

Pandora's Box of Patriotism

When the East German national anthem "Arisen from Ruins" was played this month (on October 7) for the 25th anniversary of the German Democratic Republic; the birthday guests could hum but under no circumstances sing the words.

The key line in the first stanza, 'Let us serve you well Germany, united Fatherland," is no longer in tune with the retrenchment policy of the East German Communists. As the GDR celebrates in prosperity and basks in its newly-found acceptance by the family of nations, the leadership is in no mood to reopen the Pandora's box labelled "Deutschland."

In fact, the word "Germany" has been struck from virtually all but the title of the ruling Socialist Unity Party of Germany and its main newspaper, Neues Deutschland. Only a few days before the festivities, the Government decreed changes in the 1968 Constitution that amounted to a wholesale eradication of the term "German nation." Although the late Walter Ulbricht hardly looked like a glowing nationalist when he ruled East Germany, with hindsight he now seems more and more like a post-war Bismarck compared with his successor, Erich Honecker.

An old Central European saying, however, goes: "The louder the drums roll, the more sound it is they drown." East Germans may not be talking or even thinking much about a united Germany, but there is no doubt — least of all to East Europeans — that they act as if the GDR is part of a much larger German entity that includes West Germany.

East Germans may scream out their lungs for the East German football team playing West Germany, but when West Germany plays anyone else then the sympathies of East Germans are on its side. East Germans will defend their system in interminable debates with West Germans, but when they travel to other socialist countries they go to extreme lengths to display GDR nationality stickers on their cars instead of the D sign (for Deutschland) used by West Germans.

German patriotism has had a hard time of it in the GDR since the country's creation. To some extent, it finds an outlet through pride in the GDR, but an insufficient one.

One is constantly discovering hidden pockets of nationalism where one would least expect them: among young East Germans and among the technocrats who run the economy. In most cases it is nourished by the belief that East Germans have been robbed of their just rewards by the enforced ties with the Soviet Union. Increasingly, it is "in" among young East Germans to sing forbidden university songs of the old German duelling fraternities and some of the marching songs of the former German Army.

East Germans are probably no more nationalistic than are West Germans, a result of the searing Nazi experience. However, the official suppression of even the most harmless expressions of unity with Germans in the West has given such matters a weight they would not otherwise have.

The Government of the GDR has pulled out all stops to celebrate the 25th anniversary. New coins are being issued bearing the Lincolnesque inscription: "Everything with the people, everything for the people." A grandiose white marble and tinted glass Palace of the Republic is taking shape in the heart of East Berlin where the royal palace once stood. Among other features it will contain one of Europe's biggest discotheques, a decided concession to the industrious youth of East Germany, and a coffee house where more sedate East Berliners can take their cakes and whipped cream.

Medals and money prizes are being distributed in enormous numbers to everyone from the meritorious milker from a collective farm to the residents of Block 24 in Weissensee, East Berlin "for exemplary order and safety" in tending their 17,000 square metres of lawn.

Composers have been commissioned to compose birthday songs, such as the new one about the flag:

"Not the wind which whips it
Makes our flag so beautiful.
Not the fluttering in the breeze
Makes us follow behind it.
Not its glow and its rays
Move our hearts to beat faster.
No, it's the red of the worker's flag
Borne high by the right bearer
That makes it so beautiful.
Then all our comrades follow it
To the revolution against war and profits."

Unlike China, very few people in East Germany ever seem to learn these texts or melodies, though they nonetheless provide regular work for an entire song-writing industry. Meanwhile, East Germans are provided with a steady diet of news about the impending collapse of capitalism in West Germany and elsewhere.

"It cannot happen quickly enough for me," says one East Berliner wryly. "Then there wouldn't be a single reason left for not allowing us out to witness the final destruction of the old order."

SHAKING OFF THE STARDUST

By ANTHONY LEWIS

At his confirmation hearings a year ago, Secretary of State Kissinger was asked his view of CIA covert operations. He replied in terms of American values: "I would say that our genius does not reside in clandestine activities on a broad scale." He added the caveat that he thought it would be dangerous to abolish "certain types of these activities."

Another public expression of Kissinger's views on interference in other countries was former president Nixon's speech of last June 5, warning against too strong American support for the cause of Soviet Jews and dissenters. The voice was the voice of Nixon, but the hands were surely the hands of Kissinger:

"We would not welcome the intervention of other countries in our domestic affairs, and we cannot expect them to be co-operative when we seek to intervene directly in theirs. We cannot gear our foreign policy to transformation of other societies."

While opposing intervention in behalf of freedom in the Soviet Union, we now know, Kissinger presided over a program of subversion that helped turn Chile from democracy to tyranny. He did so not with his public attitude of concern for American values and respect for national sovereignty but with an arrogant assumption of the right to determine the fate of other societies. He reportedly told the Forty Committee, which controls secret activities abroad:

"I don't see why we need to stand by and watch a country go Communist due to the irresponsibility of its own people."

The point of reciting the record is not to catch Kissinger in some more dissembling. Anyone who cares knows by now that that is his nature. Even after the Chile caper was exposed, he could not resist misrepresenting its character when he urged Congressional leaders not to restrain covert operations. He is like Humpty Dumpty, who said in a rather scornful tone: "When I use a word, it means just what I chose it to mean — neither more nor less."

The need, rather, is for the country to see Kissinger whole, without stardust in his eyes. Along with his undoubted brilliance as a negotiator there come defects that are increasingly apparent and that require correction elsewhere.

Two thoughtful appraisals of the Kissinger record have just appeared. One, written for The Boston Globe, by Richard Holbrooke, managing editor of the magazine Foreign Policy. The other, in the current Atlantic, is by Thomas L. Hughes, president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Holbrooke hails Kissinger's ability, calling him "the most succesful diplomat in American history," but puts a critical focus on his methods and values.

He can manoeuvre effectively, Holbrooke suggests, because he operates without limits of principle or conviction. In the Vietnam negotiations, for example, he "was wholly free of any constraint based on a set of moral beliefs." Nor does he let "human beings interfere with policy." Some of his former associates "consider him wholly without feeling for human suffering."

And he is "obsessively secretive." His aim is to remove the constraint of what Holbrooke calls America's "natural and healthy taste for open debate." He keeps anyone else from sharing in the real work of foreign pblicy.

There is no visible political substitute for Kissinger. But other institutions, in Congress and the executive, must reassert other values and other interests than his. We cannot let Kissinger alone define America's genius and the world's concerns.

TODAY'S GRAIN

WINNIPEG (CP) — Good buyer interest pushed rapeseed prices up the daily trading at the close today on the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange.

Feed wheat rose the limit in some contract months, while rye and barley also posted substantial gains. Corn and oats were largely unchanged.

Wednesday's volume of trade was 1,288,000 bushels of rapeseed, 444,000 of flax, 2,055,000 of barley, 1,261,000 of feed wheat, 589,000 of oats, 824,000 of rye and none of corn.

Electors Group Concerned—But Not With the NDP

Spokesmen for both the New Democratic Party and the newly-formed Victoria civic group, the Association of Concerned Electors, said Wednesday the association has no official link with the NDP and does not herald the start of party involvement in local civic politics.

Joan Johnston, spokesman for the group, stressed that it is broadly based and non-political, and the fact that certain persons known to be NDP supporters attended the two recent meetings was "quite accidental."

"We were there just as people," she said.

Johnston said the impetus to form the group started with some people lunching together one day, airing their individual concerns about City Hall policies and saying "Gee, why don't we do something about it."

Like-minded citizens were called together in an "ad hoc manner," a loosely-structured group formed under her chairmanship, and the sequel earlier this week was the group's nomination of a slate of three candidates for the Nov. 16 election.

A former Burnaby school trustee who is now treasurer of the James Bay Community Association, Johnston said many of those who attended the two meetings "have arms in various parts of the community," but they are a diverse group to which no particular political label can be attached.

The association aims to have a representation "from the entire area, all the citizens of Victoria," she added.

Kay Lines, one of the endorsed candidates who is also active in the James Bay Community Association, termed the association "a very hodge-podge group," representing a broad cross-section of the community and residents of various political persuasions.

"I really hope they are representative of all Victoria," she said.

Among those who attended Tuesday night's meeting were Roland Morgan, research assistant to the NDP caucus, Wayne Harding, administrative assistant to Highways Minister Graham Lea and Dan Miller, Lea's executive assistant.

Harding told a Times reporter he attended "as a citizen only," and said emphatically there is no official NDP connection with the association.

If one or two prominent Conservatives had been present would some people have drawn the conclusion that ACE was a "front for the Conservative party," he speculated.

Bill Fawcett, representative of the Victoria constituency on the NDP Provincial Council, said under party policy it is "quite possible" that some day Victoria could see a slate of NDP candidates for a municipal election.

But to date no such decision had been made, he said. "We have been thinking about the possibility but we don't think we are prepared to go ahead at the present time."

"A lot of work goes into getting prepared for such a thing, for instance drawing up the party's municipal policy for Victoria, and it also takes a fair amount of financing.

Fawcett said meanwhile some party members in Victoria "who feel we should be in that area" have attended the ACE meetings, but only in an individual capacity. It is party policy to encourage all members to take an active role in municipal politics, he said.

At his news conference earlier this week, Mayor Peter Pollen appeared to be referring to the association when he said:

"I look with a little apprehension at some of the narrow viewpoint of some people who are coming forward. It is dangerous if people are mainly for one cause."

Pollen said it would be "tragic" if partisan politics were introduced into Victoria, particularly as the present council had been so "progressive" in its policies.

How 'The Bug' Began: Could It Happen Here?

The idea of an all-Canadian "people's car" which surfaces occasionally — most recently from a disgruntled branch of the automakers' union in Oshawa — is logical, practical and, of course, completely, utterly unlikely.

Most of our deflated cash for wheels now goes to people who were at our throats less than a generation ago or, with few exceptions, American products with such a built-in obsolesence in quality and style that they are, as one of Ralph Nader's men put it recently, "rolling disasters."

We have the habit of electing free enterprise governments and will, I suppose, far into the future and so the theory is inviolate that what's good for General Motors is good for Canada. Yet a surprisingly strong case may be made for making our own sturdy, small pollution-free car, completely stripped of costly chrome, for sale at home and abroad.

For one thing, most of this country presents driving problems that requires a car of specific design at low cost. Moreover there's a constant cry for a greater use of our raw resources and for increased employment, national problems which might be solved to an astonishing degree by manufacturing an automobile that would fit our needs.

What's more we have the know-how. Our war-time production of tanks and airplanes was pretty convincing proof that we can build machines as well as any people in the world. Indeed, we did so well in the war years and kept so many people in jobs and so many boys in nice, new tanks and airplanes that now, in retrospect, it seems a shame that the peace got in the way of making us an industrial nation.

The argument that we are too small a country to have our own automobile doesn't hold water, either. Both Sweden and Czechoslovakia make distinctive cars that earn considerable export earnings while our own dollars leave for Detroit, Tokyo or West Germany.

Matter of fact, the whole blueprint for such a plan may be found in almost any German archives since the forerunner of the modern-day Volkswagen, which did more than any other product to make West Germany an industiral giant again, was truly a "people car" in every sense of the word.

That, of course, was a pre-war dream, but most of us who served for any length of time in Germany during and after the Second World Thing were exposed to it and, in my own case, led me to wonder if it would work here.

In those pre-war years everybody in Germany called the Volkswagen the "KdF", which comes from the name Kraft dursch Freude of "Strength Through Joy." The idea was that a mass-produced, one-type, four-passenger car of simple design could be turned out cheaply by the state, mainly to give the people an additional means of recreation (so they could all get big and strong and conquer the world).

The idea started in 1934 when the German motor car companies were asked to whip up a design and get the thing going. They were understandably gloomy about creating their own competition and stalled so long that the job was finally put in the hands of the German Labor Front.

Actually the buyers underwrote the project. Even before the plant was put up there were 250,000 subscribers kicking in two dollars a week and hopefully looking forward to the day when their horseless carriage would be delivered. The total factory price was listed at 990 Reichmarks or just about $400.

Quite a few test models were built and some were still going around when I was in those parts, but the proposed factory at Fallersleben, near Hanover, never got into full production.

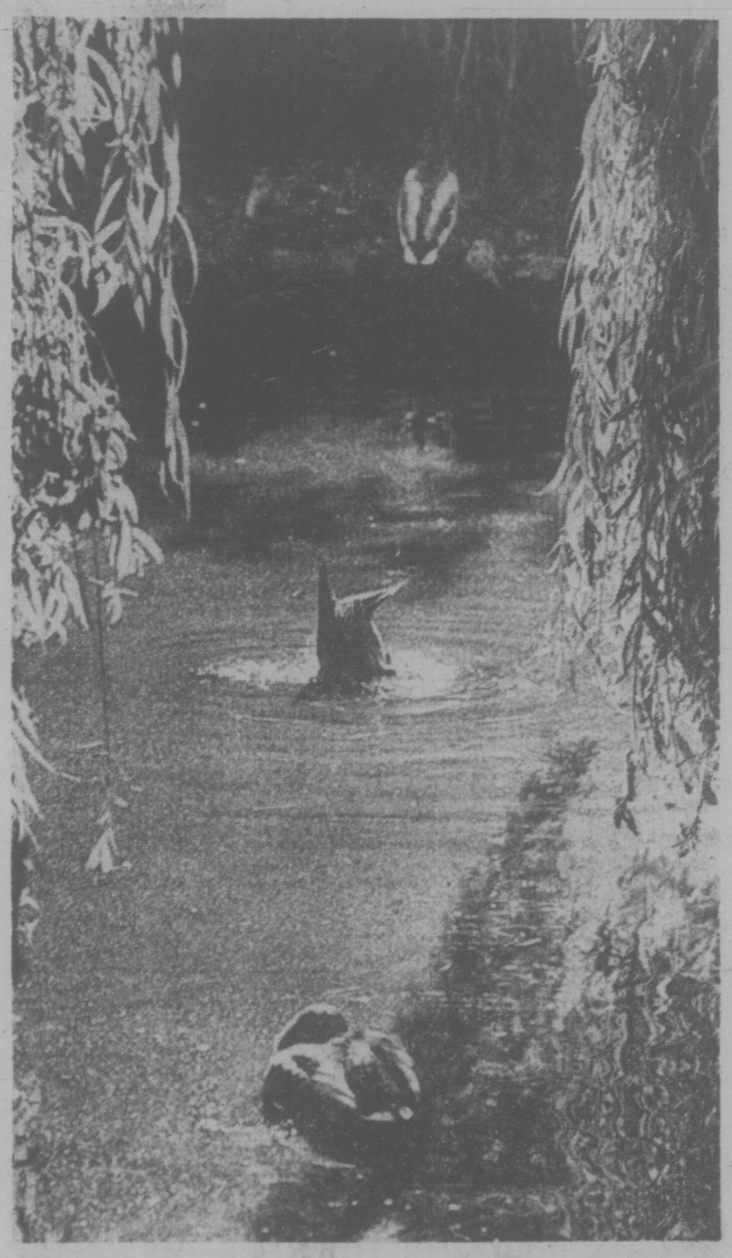
The car, itself, at those prices was a lulu, as we used to say, and incorporated many of the features that have since made the Volkswagen a big seller throughout the world. It looked more like a Fiat, at that time, but the engine was a 24-horsepower, air-cooled job placed in the rear and the first models gave up to 40 miles to a gallon with a top speed of 65 miles an hour.

There were some radical departures that appalled the traditional manufacturers, but turned out to be eminently sensible. The frame, for example, was tubular and carried heat from the engine, just at the Volkswagen does today.

Just for laughs I talked to three Victoria dealers yesterday and found them, as you might expect, rather cool to the idea. They do not think, for one thing, that an all-Canadian car, produced from scratch, could complete in price with the Japanese-made cars without a massive world market that might take years to create.

They're inclined to think, too, that Canadians are hooked on the selling technique of a new model each and every year and inclined to think of the automobile as a badge of social distinction and not merely as cheap, reliable transportation.

I'd have pointed out that that was precisely the objection of the KdF in its formative years, but then, again, maybe they're right.



WHAT IS IT that ducks find so intriguing, down there among the weeds on the bottom of the pond? Food, that's what. When it's a rainy day at Beacon Hill Park and there aren't many people around to hand out bread, it doesn't much matter whether a duck goes mooching above or below the surface. (John McKay photo)

Dispose-to-Rule Saanich Mayor Asks Residents

Saanich residents today were asked by Mayor Ed Lum to strictly follow garbage collection regulations to ease the emergency caused by work-to-rule procedures being carried out by 300 municipal employees.

He said he had received hundreds of calls from residents, complaining that their garbage had not been picked up.

"Supervisory personnel are doing their best to pick up garbage not being collected by the regular crew," Lum said. "There's not much more we can do except ask people to co-operate by not filling their garbage cans so full."

Members of Local 374, Canadian Union of Public Employees, held a meeting Wednesday night and decided to continue work-to-rule.

President Jim Brett said today there had been a motion to rescind the work-to-rule decision made at an earlier special meeting but, by a large vote — about two-thirds of those present — it was agreed to carry on working to rule.

Brett said the decision was originally prompted by the "lack of consideration on the part of the council on our request for an interim increase (of $100 a month to offset cost-of-living increases)."

He said lack of consideration "in other areas" had made Wednesday night's large turnout determined to continue the strategy.

Brett said the next move is up to council and suggested a meeting be called between council and a representative from the local.

He said refuse collectors had been made to appear as "the bad guys" but the municipality is actually at fault because the garbage pickup bylaw had not been enforced until now.

Brett said he understood managerial staff is initiating "an advertising campaign" to make residents aware of the bylaw regulations.

These, Brett said, included size, kind and number of containers.

Region Plugs Power Program Into Highlands

The Capital Region Board Wednesday gave its approval to B.C. Hydro plans to build a $5 million, 500 kilovolt power line through the Highlands and Malahat districts.

Of the three possible routes for the line, the regional board endorsed the one that would leave intact an area of the Highlands slated for heavy residential development under the regional plan.

If given final approval by B.C. Hydro, the line will run from the Pike Lake substation, west across the Highlands crossing near the intersection of Munns and Millstream Lake Roads, across Finlayson Arm at Christmas Point, about a mile north of the present crossing, and continue to a point south of Shawnigan Lake. The line will be hooked up with 500 kv lines to be brought down the Island from Qualicum.

The existing 138 kv power line which runs through the southern portion of the Highlands, will be taken out by about 1990, E. S. Collins of Hydro's land division told regional directors Wednesday.

He said it was possible that a new kind of steel pole could be used in areas where the line would be exposed to public view, instead of the "more-unsightly" lattice-work type poles.

Hydro held two public meetings on the power lines late in 1973 and early this year where some residents from the Highlands and Malahat expressed opposition to the plan.

The planned line passes mainly through undeveloped area in the Highlands, but at least two properties near the Millstream Lake-Munns Road intersection could be affected.

Kerry Joy, the owner of one of the properties, said today he is not sure how close the line will come to his house as Hydro has not yet released detailed plans of the route.

"I'll have to make a decision on whether to sell or to offer the property to Hydro after I find out how close it will be," Joy said.

He said approval of the route was a "hard piece of news for all Highlands residents."

"Any new route through a wild area such as the Highlands is a destruction of the natural area and it's a shame."

Ultimatum by Janitors: Settlement by Oct. 25

The long-standing rating dispute between school custodians and Greater Victoria school board must be settled by Oct. 25 or it will become a "dead issue," a union spokesman warned today.

Bob Cunningham, first-vice-president of local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said the decision to call an ultimatum was made by union executive at a meeting Wednesday.

If the matter isn't settled by the 25th, he said, the union will refuse to discuss the servicing of school rentals and night school functions by custodians in negotiations for its 1975 contract.

CUPE claims its custodians aren't being adequately paid for work involved in opening the schools for evening functions.

It says the present contract states that each school be rated to determine how much custodial work was involved at each school, including extra work created by evening functions.

Cunningham said that rating was never done in the year-and-a-half since the contract was signed, and what is now being done by the school board is "sort of a pretext of rating."

A board spokesman said today the board is now engaged in rating the schools, and has promised CUPE it will be completed by Oct. 31.

The custodians have refused to assist in the rating, he said.

The rating dispute led custodians last month to begin protesting by refusing to service or open the doors to night school classes.

The school board has countered by filing a complaint with the Labor Relations Board asking the labor board to end this limiting of service.

Today for the third day an unusual number of maintenance workers, 37, have booked off sick. Wednesday 26 custodians were off sick.

21 Days to Decide on Future

Thirty-five property owners in Esquimalt will spend the next three weeks wrestling with a co-operative decision on the future development of a 23-acre parcel of land at the northwest end of the municipality.

Ald. Terry Prentice said today the owners of property between the E and N Railroad tracks and Admirals Road have been asked by council to submit by letter within three weeks "their hopes for their neighborhood."

He said the residents attended a meeting at municipal hall Wednesday and the majority wanted to maintain the present character of the neighborhood, mainly single family homes on large lots, but zoned for duplex development.

"But development is inevitable."

Council has received one proposal for townhouse development on two of the lots on Admirals and another development proposal is in the offing, he said.

Prentice predicted there's "only a slim chance the residents will agree what should be done, but council will try to filter out of their reactions some common wish and make a decision based on that."

Camosun Contract Struck

The faculty association of Camosun College has negotiated a first collective agreement with the college.

The agreement must now be ratified by the association and by the college council.

Neither Norman Preston, faculty negotiator, nor Dr. John Duffus, college negotiator, expect problems getting ratification.

Preston said the first contract basically contains many conditions that the college had previously granted to faculty before the faculty association was certified as a bargaining agent.

The agreement calls for binding arbitration to settle labor disputes.

This first contract expires next March 31 so negotiations on the second agreement will begin next month, said Duffus.

Main question left up in the air just whom the faculty association is bargaining for.

UVic-Notre Dame Link Surprise Proposal Aim

University of Victoria officials will "wait with interest" provincial government plans which may include making the small campus of Notre Dame University in Nelson an extension of UVic.

UVic acting-president S. A. Jennings said today a statement by Premier Barrett that the government would think about linking the two campuses "was entirely new."

"We'll await with interest to see exactly what the premier has in mind," said Jennings.

Barrett promised Wednesday in Nelson to give "pensive thought" to a proposal from the Nelson city council to make NDU an extension of UVic or University of B.C.

The premier assured the local council that the government would not close the facility, which has an enrolment of some 600 and is threatened with closure because of funding difficulties and labor problems.

JENNINGS
. . . waiting with interest

The provincial government had announced in June it would take over the university and that same month Education Minister Eileen Dailly was reported as saying the government would decide on NDU's future by January, 1975.

Said Barrett Wednesday: "We just haven't made up our minds as yet to what the future education role of Notre Dame should be. It will play a continuing role in some form and we shall have a decision for you before the end of the year.

Making the university an extension of one of the province's larger campuses, he said, "is cause for pensive thought, pensive thought."

STILL PAYING THROUGH NOSE

CRESTON (CP)—Premier Dave Barrett says bad drivers will continue "to pay through the nose until they smarten up and become better drivers."

Barrett made the comment Wednesday after he said the government has made no decision on elimination of the $10 driver certificate.

He said at a luncheon that regardless of changes made, the penalty point system will be maintained to assess financial penalties against drivers with bad records.

Under the present Autoplan program, penalty points are assessed against drivers for traffic violations and anyone with more than six points in a year is forced to pay a special assessment to a maximum of $420.

Barrett's travels Wednesday—the third day of his two-week public relations tour of the province—started in Nelson, then took him to Salmo and Creston and wound up with a public rally in Trail where he again told an audience of 600 the government would "sock it to the bad drivers."

FIRST STEP IN WILKINSON ROAD PHASE-OUT

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Forty prisoners likely will move to a new trailer camp near Jordan River in the first move toward phasing out antiquated Wilkinson Road jail by the end of the year.

Hal McGillivray, deputy director of the prison, said Wednesday the corrections branch is acquiring 40 acres in the provincial forest reserve seven miles beyond Jordan River on the road to Port Renfrew.

He said four acres will be developed into a campsite consisting of dormitory trailers for 40 of the 90 men at Wilkinson Road, as well as trailers for cooking, recreation, office and storage.

Initial outlay for the new camp is expected to be $100,000. The figure does not include costs for clearing or installing basic services.

McGillivray, who is implementing the program, said he hoped to complete a budget by next week.

It will be reviewed by a special three-member panel which the attorney-general's department struck last month to consider alternative programs for the men in Wilkinson Road jail.

The members include Ed Stanton, probation officer in the Victoria area; Martin McNeil, a University of Victoria graduate student, and Ted Pollard, a Victoria lawyer.

McGillivray hoped work on the site could begin within two weeks.

There is a 30-day delivery on the trailers, he said.

"We would like to be able to start the program by the end of November . . . although it could be anytime between now and Christmas."

The inmates — all minimum to medium security risks and serving sentences of less than two years — will not be involved in setting up the camp, but will make improvements to the property.

Rayonier of Canada holds a tree farm licence on the 40-acre site and McGillivray hopes the licence will be transferred to the corrections service. The company reforested the area in 1957.

Ferry Fare Boost Hinted

JOAN KENNEDY

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Transport Minister Bob Strachan hinted today that B.C. Ferries fares may be increasing soon and inflation may also force an increase in next year's Autoplan premiums.

Car and passenger fares on B.C. Ferries have not increased since the service began in 1960, said Strachan, and the system has suffered annual operating deficits since 1967.

This year's deficit may be as high as $20 million, he said.

While not actually confirming the possibility of rate increases Strachan said he has asked for a report to be prepared on the ferries' financial status.

He called B.C. Ferries the "best ferry bargain in the world" and noted huge increases in operating costs, especially the cost of fuel and labor.

Last week B.C. Ferries increased its commercial rates.

Speaking during the taping of B.C. TV's Capital Comment program, Strachan announced that a full statement on Autoplan will be made at the end of this month.

At that time ICBC will disclose its premium for next year, as well as any new programs or subsidies.

Strachan evaded the question of whether drivers' certificates may be cancelled next year and said the entire 1975 program will be announced at the end of the month.

Again Strachan would not confirm the possibility of premium increases next year and he said "people will be happy with the rate structure."

But he told reporters that private insurance companies in the rest of Canada were predicting a $20 million loss this year despite two rate increases in the last 12 months.

He also cited increases in the accident rate and the cost of repairs.

Also on the topic of ICBC, Strachan said the government is negotiating with insurance agents on the commission they will receive for selling government insurance next year.

The agents had originally agreed to a seven per cent basic commission, but are now complaining the rate is too low.

Joan Kennedy Charged

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Joan Kennedy, the wife of Senator Edward Kennedy (Dem. Mass.), has been charged with driving under the influence of alcohol after her convertible crashed into two other cars stopped for a street light.

Fairfax County police said the charge on conviction carries maximum penalties of a year in jail and a $1,000 fine, and suspension of driver's licence for six months. Police said, however, that such penalties are reserved for grave cases that usually involve injuries or fleeing the scene of the accident, circumstances that don't exist in Mrs. Kennedy's case.

Police said Mrs. Kennedy was administered a breath analysis test, but they would not disclose the results. The charge of driving under the influence is the only charge in the state of Virginia if alcohol or drugs are found above a certain level.

No one was injured in the crash.

DOW SOARS

NEW YORK — The stock market advanced again today, continuing the strongest rally in months.

The 2 p.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 24.33 at 655.35, adding to a 28-point surge Wednesday.

TRASHMEN TO EARN $18,400

ANCHORAGE (AP) — Garbage collectors have won a three-year contract calling for $18,400 a year in the pact's final year after a 39-day strike.

Municipal trade unions returned to work Wednesday after reaching agreement with the city on a contract that raises wages 46.5 per cent over three years, a city spokesman said.

The wage hikes are retroactive to Jan. 1.

Riot Team Cools Boston

Times News Services

BOSTON — Four hundred riot-trained state and metropolitan police arrived in racially torn Boston today to help protect children and enforce a court-ordered plan to integrate Boston's public schools.

Busloads of black children quietly entered schools in the neighborhood.

The extra policemen, outfitted with riot gear, were ordered into the area by Gov. Francis Sargent after a federal judge rejected Mayor Kevin White's request for 125 federal marshals to help keep the peace.

In Washington, President Ford said the court-ordered busing "in my judgment, was not the best solution to quality education in Boston."

He added, however, "I think it's of maximum importance for the citizens of Boston to respect the law."

Street violence Wednesday was centred in the predominently black Roxbury section, as it was the previous day.

At least 14 arrests and 11 injuries were reported Wednesday as black youths threw rocks at buses and cars and looted stores in the Roxbury section.

GRAY LASHES GOVERNMENT

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal MP Herb Gray attacked the government today for standing idle in the face of rising food prices.

Gray, the former consumer affairs minister dropped by Prime Minister Trudeau in a summer cabinet shuffle, criticized his former cabinet colleagues for saying nothing about rising bread prices, withdrawing a subsidy on milk and permitting food marketing boards to operate in defiance of consumer interests.

Thieu's Police Kick, Beat Demonstrators, Newsmen

SAIGON (AP) Hundreds of persons demonstrating against President Nguyen Van Thieu's government marched through downtown Saigon today.

And for the second time in less than two weeks, police beat up Western correspondents covering the protests.

The demonstrations, the biggest against Thieu in three years, were generally free of police interference until a splinter Buddhist group continued to demonstrate in front of the National Assembly after most of the about 1,000 protesters had dispersed.

Uniformed policemen began to scuffle with the stick-wielding Buddhists, who were complaining that police had beaten two of their comrades earlier in the day.

At least six demonstrators were taken to hospital, including a Buddhist nun with a broken leg and a 40-year-old man beaten for carrying an anti-government banner near Saigon's central market.

When Western reporters filmed and photographed the scuffles, men identified by sources close to the police as plainclothes policemen turned on them.

Two reporters—Haney Howell, Siagon bureau chief of CBS, and Time magazine's Barry Hillenbrand—were kicked and beaten.

Howell, who was beaten with Associated Press photographer Neal Ulewich while covering similar demonstrations 10 days ago, was taken to hospital.

Citizenship Wait Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigrants will qualify for Canadian citizenship after three years in this country under legislation introduced today in the Commons.

At present, all immigrants must wait five years before qualifying for citizenship.

"Under the new bill,' 'State Secretary Hugh Faulkner said, "applicants for naturalization are treated alike, regardless of sex or country of origin."

Female immigrants, regardless of the fact that they marry Canadians, now would have to wait three years like everyone else.

It also would reduce the age of majority to 18 years from 21, which would allow young immigrants 18 or over to apply for citizenship on their own behalf instead of through a parent.

Faulkner, explaining the proposed amendments to the Citizenship Act said they are designed to make the legislation "more equitable, logical and consistent."

The bill also would eliminate differences in rules applying to men and women.

Generally, a woman who marries a Canadian citizen may become a citizen right away, whereas a male immigrant has to wait the normal two or five years.

NEWS BRIEFS

Boats Explode

RICHMOND (CP) — Police and Fraser River harbor authorities are trying to determine if there was loss of life in a boat explosion that destroyed three vessels at Steveston early today.

Richmond fire department officials said they were unable to fight the fires because two of the boats, in flames, had drifted out into the river and the third had sunk when they arrived at the scene at 3 a.m.

Bank Drops Clients

DETROIT (AP) — The Michigan National Bank of Detroit will close all savings accounts with balances under $50 starting next week because of rising handling costs, bank officials said.

Mayo May Close

NANAIMO (CP) — The Mayo Lumber Co. will close its sawmill operation here Dec. 6 unless market conditions in the lumber industry improve, a company spokesman said Wednesday. About one-half its employees are already laid off.

Plot Uncovered

ROME (Reuter) — Italy's anti-terrorism police squad has arrested four right-wingers on charges of plotting to kill leading Italian politicians as a prelude to a coup d'etat, the interior ministry said.

Britons Stream To Polls

Times News Services

LONDON — A bomb scare today forced evacuation of Liberal party headquarters in London as Britons streamed to the polls in heavy numbers.

Police searched the building but found nothing and allowed staff to return after 35 minutes.

It apparently was a hoax, police said.

The Liberal headquarters was also ransacked in a break-in on election eve Wednesday.

A spokesman said at first "this looks like another Watergate." Police later said it appeared to be a plain case of burglary.

A bomb scare also delayed voting in Belfast.

If the forecasts of all the major pollsters are to be believed, the governing Labor party was a heavy favorite to be returned to power. But the polls have been dead wrong in the past.

This time, pollsters conceded that late shifts by undecided voters and apathy might result in an upset.

Though flattered by the predictions, Home Secretary Roy Jenkins insisted on the eve of the election:

"It's not going to be quite as easy or as decisive as that."

Prime Minister Harold Wilson, however, said be believed Labor to be "on the eve of a great victory."

Bonn Spies Preyed on Own Bosses

BONN (WP) — A former cabinet minister charged Wednesday that the West German intelligence service had been involved for years in spying on the country's top political leaders and other prominent citizens.

The ex-minister, Horst Ehmke, said that the intelligence agency, the Federal Information Service, had compiled what he regarded as illegal dossiers on 34 persons, including two former chancellors and two former presidents.

Testifying before a parliamentary investigating committee, Ehmke said that the list of those put under surveillance included leaders of all the West German political parties and persons prominent in academic, military and other fields.

Among them, Ehmke claimed, were former chancellors Willy Brandt and Ludwig Erhard and former presidents Gustav Heinemann and Heinrich Luebke.

Others that he named included Christian Democratic leaders Rainer Barzel and Franz-Josef Strauss; Erich Mende, former chairman of the Free Democratic party; Gen. Hans Speidel former general inspector of the armed forces, and Simon Wiesenthal, director of the Nazi-hunting Jewish Documentation centre in Vienna.

Ehmke's allegations came in the course of testimony before the committee investigating the circumstances that enabled an East German spy, Guenter Guillaume, to win a post on Brandt's chancellory staff.

The uncovering of Guillaume's identity triggered Brandt's resignation as chancellor last May.

Ehmke's allegations seem certain to stir the same kind of debate that was touched off in the United States following revelations that the Central Intelligence Agency had been drawn into the Watergate affair.

The Bonn agency, which is commonly called the BND after its German initials, was created by the CIA during the postwar occupation period and covertly financed by Washington before its absorption into the West German government.

For many years, it was referred to in intelligence circles as the Gehlen bureau, after Gen. Reinhard Gehlen, its first head.

According to Ehmke's testimony Wednesday, the BND's domestic spying activities began during Gehlen's tenure and continued after his retirement in the mid 1960s. Ehmke said he learned of them when the Brandt government took office in 1969 and he was assigned supervision over the intelligence organization as part of his duties in the chancellory office.

GRAIN BILL VOTED

OTTAWA (CP) — Back-to-work legislation to end the six-week Vancouver grain-handlers strike received final Commons approval today.

The legislation, which now goes to the Senate, passed by a voice vote without debate.

Following debate in the Senate, the bill must be given royal assent. It becomes law the day after royal assent, which is expected to come on Friday.

The legislation ends the strike and imposes a settlement based on a conciliation report prepared by Dr. Neil Perry of Victoria.

Henry Kancs, secretary-treasurer of the 550-member Grain Workers' Union, said Wednesday the workers could have export grain moving again by Tuesday if the legislation is passed without delay.

The bill was approved by the Commons labor committee after four hours of discussion Wednesday night. The Conservatives criticized the government for not allowing witnesses other than Labor Minister John Munro and department officials to give their views on events during the 10 months of bargaining.

STILL PAYING THROUGH NOSE

CRESTON (CP)—Premier Dave Barrett says bad drivers will continue "to pay through the nose until they smarten up and become better drivers."

Barrett made the comment Wednesday after he said the government has made no decision on elimination of the $10 driver certificate.

He said at a luncheon that regardless of changes made, the penalty point system will be maintained to assess financial penalties against drivers with bad records.

Under the present Autoplan program, penalty points are assessed against drivers for traffic violations and anyone with more than six points in a year is forced to pay a special assessment to a maximum of $420.

Barrett's travels Wednesday—the third day of his two-week public relations tour of the province—started in Nelson, then took him to Salmo and Creston and wound up with a public rally in Trail where he again told an audience of 600 the government would "sock it to the bad drivers."

FIRST STEP IN WILKINSON ROAD PHASE-OUT

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Forty prisoners likely will move to a new trailer camp near Jordan River in the first move toward phasing out antiquated Wilkinson Road jail by the end of the year.

Hal McGillivray, deputy director of the prison, said Wednesday the corrections branch is acquiring 40 acres in the provincial forest reserve seven miles beyond Jordan River on the road to Port Renfrew.

He said four acres will be developed into a campsite consisting of dormitory trailers for 40 of the 90 men at Wilkinson Road, as well as trailers for cooking, recreation, office and storage.

Initial outlay for the new camp is expected to be $100,000. The figure does not include costs for clearing or installing basic services.

McGillivray, who is implementing the program, said he hoped to complete a budget by next week.

It will be reviewed by a special three-member panel which the attorney-general's department struck last month to consider alternative programs for the men in Wilkinson Road jail.

The members include Ed Stanton, probation officer in the Victoria area; Martin McNeil, a University of Victoria graduate student, and Ted Pollard, a Victoria lawyer.

McGillivray hoped work on the site could begin within two weeks.

There is a 30-day delivery on the trailers, he said.

"We would like to be able to start the program by the end of November . . . although it could be anytime between now and Christmas."

The inmates — all minimum to medium security risks and serving sentences of less than two years — will not be involved in setting up the camp, but will make improvements to the property.

Rayonier of Canada holds a tree farm licence on the 40-acre site and McGillivray hopes the licence will be transferred to the corrections service. The company reforested the area in 1957.

Ferry Fare Boost Hinted

JOAN KENNEDY

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Transport Minister Bob Strachan hinted today that B.C. Ferries fares may be increasing soon and inflation may also force an increase in next year's Autoplan premiums.

Car and passenger fares on B.C. Ferries have not increased since the service began in 1960, said Strachan, and the system has suffered annual operating deficits since 1967.

This year's deficit may be as high as $20 million, he said.

While not actually confirming the possibility of rate increases Strachan said he has asked for a report to be prepared on the ferries' financial status.

He called B.C. Ferries the "best ferry bargain in the world" and noted huge increases in operating costs, especially the cost of fuel and labor.

Last week B.C. Ferries increased its commercial rates.

Speaking during the taping of B.C. TV's Capital Comment program, Strachan announced that a full statement on Autoplan will be made at the end of this month.

At that time ICBC will disclose its premium for next year, as well as any new programs or subsidies.

Strachan evaded the question of whether drivers' certificates may be cancelled next year and said the entire 1975 program will be announced at the end of the month.

Again Strachan would not confirm the possibility of premium increases next year and he said "people will be happy with the rate structure."

But he told reporters that private insurance companies in the rest of Canada were predicting a $20 million loss this year despite two rate increases in the last 12 months.

He also cited increases in the accident rate and the cost of repairs.

Also on the topic of ICBC, Strachan said the government is negotiating with insurance agents on the commission they will receive for selling government insurance next year.

The agents had originally agreed to a seven per cent basic commission, but are now complaining the rate is too low.

Joan Kennedy Charged

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Joan Kennedy, the wife of Senator Edward Kennedy (Dem.-Mass.), has been charged with driving under the influence of alcohol after her convertible crashed into two other cars stopped for a street light.

Fairfax County police said the charge on conviction carries maximum penalties of a year in jail and a $1,000 fine, and suspension of driver's licence for six months. Police said, however, that such penalties are reserved for grave cases that usually involve injuries or fleeing the scene of the accident, circumstances that don't exist in Mrs. Kennedy's case.

Police said Mrs. Kennedy was administered a breath analysis test, but they would not disclose the results. The charge of driving under the influence is the only charge in the state of Virginia if alcohol or drugs are found above a certain level.

No one was injured in the crash.

DOW SOARS

NEW YORK — The stock market advanced again today, continuing the strongest rally in months.

The 2 p.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 24.33 at 655.35, adding to a 28-point surge Wednesday.

TRASHMEN TO EARN $18,400

ANCHORAGE (AP) — Garbage collectors have won a three-year contract calling for $18,400 a year in the pact's final year after a 39-day strike.

Municipal trade unions returned to work Wednesday after reaching agreement with the city on a contract that raises wages 46.5 per cent over three years, a city spokesman said.

The wage hikes are retroactive to Jan. 1.

Riot Team Cools Boston

Times News Services

BOSTON — Four hundred riot-trained state and metropolitan police arrived in racially torn Boston today to help protect children and enforce a court-ordered plan to integrate Boston's public schools.

Busloads of black children quietly entered schools in the neighborhood.

The extra policemen, outfitted with riot gear, were ordered into the area by Gov. Francis Sargent after a federal judge rejected Mayor Kevin White's request for 125 federal marshals to help keep the peace.

In Washington, President Ford said the court-ordered busing "in my judgment, was not the best solution to quality education in Boston."

He added, however, "I think it's of maximum importance for the citizens of Boston to respect the law."

Street violence Wednesday was centred in the predominently black Roxbury section, as it was the previous day.

At least 14 arrests and 11 injuries were reported Wednesday as black youths threw rocks at buses and cars and looted stores in the Roxbury section.

GRAY LASHES GOVERNMENT

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal MP Herb Gray attacked the government today for standing idle in the face of rising food prices.

Gray, the former consumer affairs minister dropped by Prime Minister Trudeau in a summer cabinet shuffle, criticized his former cabinet colleagues for saying nothing about rising bread prices, withdrawing a subsidy on milk and permitting food marketing boards to operate in defiance of consumer interests.

Thieu's Police Kick, Beat Demonstrators, Newsmen

SAIGON (AP) — Hundreds of persons demonstrating against President Nguyen Van Thieu's government marched through downtown Saigon today.

And for the second time in less than two weeks, police beat up Western correspondents covering the protests.

The demonstrations, the biggest against Thieu in three years, were generally free of police interference until a splinter Buddhist group continued to demonstrate in front of the National Assembly after most of the about 1,000 protesters had dispersed.

Uniformed policemen began to scuffle with the stick-wielding Buddhists, who were complaining that police had beaten two of their comrades earlier in the day.

At least six demonstrators were taken to hospital, including a Buddhist nun with a broken leg and a 40-year-old man beaten for carrying an anti-government banner near Saigon's central market.

When Western reporters filmed and photographed the scuffles, men identified by sources close to the police as plainclothes policemen turned on them.

Two reporters—Haney Howell, Siagon bureau chief of CBS, and Time magazine's Barry Hillenbrand—were kicked and beaten.

Howell, who was beaten with Associated Press photographer Neal Ulewich while covering similar demonstrations 10 days ago, was taken to hospital.

Citizenship Wait Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigrants will qualify for Canadian citizenship after three years in this country under legislation introduced today in the Commons.

At present, all immigrants must wait five years before qualifying for citizenship.

"Under the new bill," State Secretary Hugh Faulkner said, "applicants for naturalization are treated alike, regardless of sex or country of origin."

Female immigrants, regardless of the fact that they marry Canadians, now would have to wait three years like everyone else.

It also would reduce the age of majority to 18 years from 21, which would allow young immigrants 18 or over to apply for citizenship on their own behalf instead of through a parent.

Faulkner, explaining the proposed amendments to the Citizenship Act said they are designed to make the legislation "more equitable, logical and consistent."

The bill also would eliminate differences in rules applying to men and women.

Generally, a woman who marries a Canadian citizen may become a citizen right away, whereas a male immigrant has to wait the normal two or five years.

NEWS BRIEFS

Boats Explode

RICHMOND (CP) — Police and Fraser River harbor authorities are trying to determine if there was loss of life in a boat explosion that destroyed three vessels at Steveston early today.

Richmond fire department officials said they were unable to fight the fires because two of the boats, in flames, had drifted out into the river and the third had sunk when they arrived at the scene at 3 a.m.

Bank Drops Clients

DETROIT (AP) — The Michigan National Bank of Detroit will close all savings accounts with balances under $50 starting next week because of rising handling costs, bank officials said.

Mayo May Close

NANAIMO (CP) — The Mayo Lumber Co. will close its sawmill operation here Dec. 6 unless market conditions in the lumber industry improve, a company spokesman said Wednesday. About one-half its employees are already laid off.

Plot Uncovered

ROME (Reuter) — Italy's anti-terrorism police squad has arrested four right-wingers on charges of plotting to kill leading Italian politicians as a prelude to a coup d'etat, the interior ministry said.

Britons Stream To Polls

Times News Services

LONDON — A bomb scare today forced evacuation of Liberal party headquarters in London as Britons streamed to the polls in heavy numbers.

Police searched the building but found nothing and allowed staff to return after 35 minutes.

It apparently was a hoax, police said.

The Liberal headquarters was also ransacked in a break-in on election eve Wednesday.

A spokesman said at first "this looks like another Watergate." Police later said it appeared to be a plain case of burglary.

A bomb scare also delayed voting in Belfast.

If the forecasts of all the major pollsters are to be believed, the governing Labor party was a heavy favorite to be returned to power. But the polls have been dead wrong in the past.

This time, pollsters conceded that late shifts by undecided voters and apathy might result in an upset.

Though flattered by the predictions, Home Secretary Roy Jenkins insisted on the eve of the election:

"It's not going to be quite as easy or as decisive as that."

Prime Minister Harold Wilson, however, said he believed Labor to be "on the eve of a great victory."

Bonn Spies Preyed on Own Bosses

BONN (WP) — A former cabinet minister charged Wednesday that the West German intelligence service had been involved for years in spying on the country's top political leaders and other prominent citizens.

The ex-minister, Horst Ehmke, said that the intelligence agency, the Federal Information Service, had compiled what he regarded as illegal dossiers on 54 persons, including two former chancellors and two former presidents.

Testifying before a parliamentary investigating committee, Ehmke said that the list of those put under surveillance included leaders of all the West German political parties and persons prominent in academic, military and other fields.

Among them, Ehmke claimed, were former chancellors Willy Brandt and Ludwig Erhard and former presidents Gustav Heinemann and Heinrich Luebke.

Others that he named included Christian Democratic leaders Rainer Barzel and Franz-Josef Strauss; Erich Mende, former chairman of the Free Democratic party; Gen. Hans Speidel former general inspector of the armed forces, and Simon Wiesenthal, director of the Nazi-hunting Jewish Documentation centre in Vienna.

Ehmke's allegations came in the course of testimony before the committee investigating the circumstances that enabled an East German spy, Guenter Guillaume, to win a post on Brandt's chancellory staff.

The uncovering of Guillaume's identity triggered Brandt's resignation as chancellor last May.

Ehmke's allegations seem certain to stir the same kind of debate that was touched off in the United States following revelations that the Central Intelligence Agency had been drawn into the Watergate affair.

The Bonn agency, which is commonly called the BND after its German initials, was created by the CIA during the postwar occupation period and covertly financed by Washington before its absorption into the West German government.

For many years, it was referred to in intelligence circles as the Gehlen bureau, after Gen. Reinhard Gehlen, its first head.

According to Ehmke's testimony Wednesday, the BND's domestic spying activities began during Gehlen's tenure and continued after his retirement in the mid 1960s. Ehmke said he learned of them when the Brandt government took office in 1969 and he was assigned supervision over the intelligence organization as part of his duties in the chancellory office.

GRAIN BILL VOTED

OTTAWA (CP) — Back-to-work legislation to end the six-week Vancouver grain-handlers strike received final Commons approval today.

The legislation, which now goes to the Senate, passed by a voice vote without debate.

Following debate in the Senate, the bill must be given royal assent. It becomes law the day after royal assent, which is expected to come on Friday.

The legislation ends the strike and imposes a settlement based on a conciliation report prepared by Dr. Neil Perry of Victoria.

Henry Kancs, secretary-treasurer of the 550-member Grain Workers' Union, said Wednesday the workers could have export grain moving again by Tuesday if the legislation is passed without delay.

The bill was approved by the Commons labor committee after four hours of discussion Wednesday night. The Conservatives criticized the government for not allowing witnesses other than Labor Minister John Munro and department officials to give their views on events during the 10 months of bargaining.
